Executive Summary

The Interim Independent Boundaries Review Commission (IIBRC) was established under the Constitution of Kenya (Amendment Act) No. 10 of 2008 as one of the Agenda 4 reform instruments created as part of Government's commitment to implementing electoral reforms. The reforms were to restore public confidence in the electoral process and to enhance democratic governance in Kenya. Agenda 4 acknowledges that poverty, inequitable distribution of resources and perceptions of historical injustices and exclusion of segments of the Kenyan society as major challenges. In addressing these challenges, the principal focus was reconciliation and national cohesion among Kenyans.

The Mandate of the Commission under Section 41C of the former Constitution included.

- (a) Making recommendations to Parliament on the delimitation of constituencies and local authority electoral units and the optimal number of constituencies on the basis of equality of votes;
- (b) Making recommendations to Parliament on administrative boundaries, including the fixing, reviewing and variation of boundaries of districts and other units; and
- (c) The performance of such other functions as may be prescribed by Parliament.

Following the promulgation of the Constitution of Kenya on 27th August, 2010, Section 27 of the Sixth Schedule of the Constitution stated that the Commission continues to function as constituted under the former Constitution and in terms of Sections 41B and 41C of the former Constitution but:

- (a) It shall not determine the boundaries of the counties established under the Constitution;
- (b) It shall determine the boundaries of constituencies and wards using the criteria mentioned in the Constitution;
- (c) Members of the Commission shall be subject to Chapter seven of the Constitution;
- (d) The requirement in Article 89 (2) that a review of constituency and ward boundaries shall be completed at least twelve months before a general election shall not apply to the review of boundaries preceding the first elections under the Constitution;
- (e) The Commission shall ensure that the first review of constituencies undertaken in terms of the Constitution shall not result in the loss of a constituency existing on the effective date

The Commission's underlying task was to correct historical injustices and gerrymandering of the past in the electoral process which highly contributed to the 2007 chaos as singled out by (IREC) Independent Review Commission on the General Elections held in Kenya on 27th December, 2007 (Kriegler Report). The Kriegler Report concluded that there existed gross disparities in the voting populations and gross disparity in sizes of Kenya's constituencies

The Commission undertook the delimitation of electoral boundaries and recommendations on local authority electoral units and administrative boundaries, including fixing, reviewing and variation of boundaries of districts and other units through an extensive and meticulous process.

Following an intense orientation and induction programme including a joint retreat with the Interim Independent Electoral Commission (IIEC), the IIBRC embarked on the formulation of a concept paper, methodology and work plan to guide its operations.

The Commission then undertook an extensive exercise of public outreach to inform and initiate participation of the public in the delimitation exercise. The public was then informed and invited to attend public hearings and make submissions to the Commission.

The Commission then embarked on an extensive exercise of key stakeholder consultations, provincial visits and countrywide public hearings, during which community leaders, opinion shapers, organizations and Kenyans gave views and concerns on community interest, insights, perceptions, opinions and submissions on electoral boundaries, local authority electoral areas and districts and other administrative units. A wide range of individuals and organizations were engaged to provide information on the issues, concerns and interests in the delimitation of electoral boundaries, local authority electoral areas and administrative boundaries

Concurrently, an extensive and rigorous information and data collection exercise on all the constitutional parameters was done. A review of international best practices in boundary delimitation and past Kenyan boundary reviews was also done.

A methodology for synthesizing of data relating to the population quota, geographical features and urban centres, community of interest, historical, economic and cultural ties and means of communication, was employed.

Broad analysis and modelling of scenarios to guide decision making was done using advanced statistical analysis for both qualitative and quantitative data modelled on a robust Geographical Information System (GIS) and the 2009 Census Enumerations. The Commission then proceeded to make its delimitations and recommendations.

The Commission has come up with the names and boundaries of the two hundred and ninety (290) constituencies. This report details the mandate of the Commission, the process and methodology used to determine the delimitations, recommendations and conclusions of the IIBRC.

1.0 Chapter One: Introduction

1.1 Aftermath of the General Elections of 2007

1. Following the 2007 general elections, a political crisis was triggered in Kenya which brought to the surface deep-seated and long standing divisions within the Kenyan society. It was considered that if left unaddressed, these divisions threatened the very existence of Kenya as a unified country. Consequently, Kenyans looked upon their leaders to ensure that their country would not disintegrate and get lost.¹
2. Thus, on 28th February, 2008 His Excellency President Mwai Kibaki for Government/Party of National Unity and Hon. Raila Odinga for Orange Democratic Movement acting together for Kenya signed the Agreement on the Principles of Partnership of the Coalition Government. This Agreement was witnessed by His Excellency President Jakaya Kikwete, President of the United Republic of Tanzania and Chairman of the African Union, and, His Excellency Kofi Annan, Chairman of the Panel of Eminent African Personalities.²
3. Under the Agreement and the Principles of Partnership of the Coalition Government, the Kenyan leaders committed themselves to create an environment conducive to partnership, mutual trust and confidence through constant consultations and willingness to compromise. In particular the Agreement was about seeking to enable Kenya's political leaders to look beyond partisan considerations with a view to promoting the greater interests of the nation as a whole. It provided for the means to implement a coherent and far reaching reform agenda to address the fundamental root causes of recurrent conflict and to create a better, more secure and more prosperous Kenya for all.

1.1.1 Statement of Principles on Long-term Issues and Solutions

4. Towards addressing the deep-seated and long-standing divisions within the Kenyan society and under the Kenya National Dialogue and Reconciliation mediated by His Excellency Kofi Annan, the Chairman of the Panel of Eminent African Personalities, the Statement of Principles on Long-term Issues and Solutions was signed by Kenyan leaders on 23rd May, 2008. This statement recognized the need for an agreed framework for moving forward in addressing the long-term issues and in particular, the leaders agreed:
 - (a) to be committed to the completion of the comprehensive Constitutional review process within twelve months as per the agreement of 4th March, 2008;

² See the Schedule to the National Accord and Reconciliation Acts No. 4 of 20th March, 2008

- (b) to ensure sustainable peace in the country through poverty eradication and equitable development. It was recognized that the issue of inequality manifested along income, regional and gender lines remain key challenges and within the framework of the National Accord implementation mechanism, a consultative process would be used to identify short-term, medium-term and long-term strategies to fight poverty;
 - (c) that consolidation of national cohesion and unity is a cross-cutting task that will require the efforts of all parties, ministries, civil society and all Kenyans;
 - (d) to ensuring that all citizens especially the youth have the opportunity to be gainfully employed which was crucial for the nation's economic growth, prosperity and social stability, as well as, vital for enabling each individual to develop their full potential and to live in dignity,
 - (e) to recognize that the issue of land has been a source of economic, social, political and environmental problems in Kenya for many years. Thus, need was found for establishing the factors responsible for conflicts over land and to formulate and implement short, medium and long-term recommendations on this issue; and
 - (f) that transparency and accountability in the affairs of the Government and the fight against impunity and corruption are essential if the country is to make progress in addressing all the long-term divisions within the Kenyan society³
5. As part of addressing the long-term issues towards achieving a prosperous Kenya for all, the Coalition Government committed itself to the Kenya Vision 2030. Under the political pillar on moving to the future as one nation, the country's political governance system was to be transformed across six strategic areas namely, rule of law; electoral and political processes; democracy and improved public service delivery; transparency and accountability; public administration reforms; and security, peace building and conflict management.⁴
- 6 Under electoral and political processes, the Kenya Vision 2030 seeks to cultivate genuinely competitive and issue-based politics whose strategic themes include introducing laws and regulations covering political parties; enhancing the legal and regulatory framework covering the electoral process, and conducting civic education programmes to widen knowledge and participation among citizens to achieve an informed and active citizenry.

³ See the Statement of Principles on long-term issues and solutions

⁴ Refer to the Political Pillar under Kenya Vision 2030.

7. On the other hand, under democracy and public service delivery the Kenya Vision 2030 aims to create a people-centred and politically-engaged open society. The strategies involve:
 - (a) pursuing reforms necessary to devolve power and to move budgetary resources and responsibility to local governance institutions;
 - (b) encouraging formal and informal civic education and action programmes; and
 - (c) promoting open engagement between government and civil society including free flow of information.

1.1.2 Report of the Independent Review Commission on the General Elections held in Kenya on 27th December, 2007 (Kriegler Report)

8. Within the framework of the National Accord and Reconciliation and this environment of national reformation, the Independent Review Commission on the General Elections held in Kenya on 27th December, 2007 was appointed by His Excellency the President under the Commissions of Inquiry Act on 13th March, 2008.⁵ The appointment of that Commission followed the agreement under the Agenda Item Three on how to resolve the political crisis as mediated by His Excellency Kofi Annan and the Panel of Eminent African Personalities as signed on 14th February, 2008. Under the agreement the Kenyan leaders on both sides of the political divide of the Orange Democratic Movement and the Party of National Unity agreed to establish an Independent Review Committee whose members would comprise both foreigners and Kenyans and whose mandate would be to investigate all aspects of the 2007 Presidential Election and would make findings and recommendations to improve the electoral process. The findings would be factored into the comprehensive electoral reforms that were envisaged.
9. That Commission was headed by Judge Johann Kriegler from South Africa and its terms of reference were to inquire into all the aspects of the General Election held in Kenya on 27th December, 2007 with particular emphasis on the Presidential Election. Its terms of reference were to:
 - (a) analyze the constitutional and legal framework to establish the bases for the conduct of the 2007 elections and to identify any weaknesses or inconsistencies in the electoral legislation;
 - (b) examine the organizational structure, composition, and management systems of the then Electoral Commission of Kenya (ECK) to assess its independence, capacity and functioning during the preparation and conduct of the 2007 elections;

⁵ See Gazette Notice No. 1982 of 14th March, 2008.

- (c) examine the public participation in the 2007 electoral process and the electoral environment, including the roles and conduct of the political parties, media, civil society and observers;
 - (d) investigate the organization and conduct of the 2007 electoral operations including civic and voter education; training; voter registration, logistics and security, polling and counting, vote tabulation and results processing and dispute resolution;
 - (e) investigate the vote counting and tallying for the entire election with special attention to the Presidential Elections in order to assess the integrity of the results and make recommendations for improvements, adjustments or overhaul of the system,
 - (f) assess the functional efficiency of the ECK and its capacity to discharge its mandate;
 - (g) make a report of its findings and recommend:
 - i. electoral reforms including constitutional, legislative, operational and institutional aspects as well as on accountability mechanisms for the then Electoral Commission of Kenya Commissioners and staff pertaining to electoral malpractices so as to improve future electoral processes; and
 - ii. such other necessary legal or administrative measures.⁶
10. On the delimitation of electoral boundaries in Kenya, the Kriegler Report concluded that there existed gross disparities in the voting populations of Kenya's constituencies. This state of affairs breached the fundamental equality principle of democracy which was clearly articulated and enshrined in Section 42 (3) of the then Constitution of Kenya, namely one person, one vote. This long-standing discrimination in itself impaired the integrity of the electoral process, mainly, but not only, in relation to Parliamentary elections.⁷
11. On delays in election results, the Kriegler Report concluded that the gross disparity in constituency sizes also contributed to defects and delays in tallying, recording, transcribing and transmitting results in the large constituencies. These defects and delays also contributed materially to the explosive political climate, which then build up as the country awaited the transmission and announcement of results.⁸
12. On law enforcement and dispute resolution, the Kriegler Report concluded that the system of electoral law and enforcement and dispute resolution are conceptually

⁶ Refer to Gazette Notice No 1983 of 14th March, 2008

⁷ See page 8 of the Kriegler Report

⁸ Refer to citation in note 7.

defective and were executed poorly if at all by the then ECK and the ordinary law enforcement agencies of the Government.⁹

13. The Kriegler Report also made the following pertinent conclusions:
- (a) there was no effective communication between the ECK and political parties, observers, the media or the public, particularly regarding the national tally centre, the lack of transparency resulting in misconceptions, suspicion, rumour and anger;
 - (b) the manner of appointment of the ECK Commissioners and the structure, composition and management system of the ECK were materially defective resulting in such a serious loss of independence, capacity and functional efficiency as to warrant replacing or at least radically transforming it.
 - (c) although Kenya had a legal framework for the conduct of elections, material defects in the framework combined with a culture of lawlessness at election time brought into question the capacity of the law to provide a sufficient framework for political competition, and
 - (d) the culture of electoral lawlessness had developed over many years and cannot be reversed without a concerted, non-partisan commitment to electoral integrity on the part of political leaders and which commitment will need to be sustained and monitored over time.¹⁰
14. The Kriegler Report further concluded, "Elections must ultimately be a nation building exercise, rather than a divisive one. Since elections provide a means by which political power can change hands peacefully, they need to be managed in such a way as to deliver not only an arena for peaceful political contest but also to ensure general acceptance of outcomes and stability for other nation-building activities"¹¹
15. On the basis of its conclusions, the Kriegler Report made the following key recommendations concerning the delimitation of constituencies in Kenya:
- (a) that the basic principle for the delimitation of constituencies should be the equality of the vote and the maximum departure from that principle should be clearly defined in the law (equality of the voting strength should be aimed at in all cases, although in rare specially justified circumstances a 5 to 20% deviation range could be accepted). Criteria such as density of population, population trends, means of communication, geographical features and community of interests should be retained but they should interfere minimally with the basic principle of equality of voting strength;

⁹ See page 10 of the Kriegler Report

¹⁰ Refer to citation in note 9

¹¹ Page 32 of the Kriegler Report

- (b) the process of delimitation be made accessible to the public through a consultation process and enough time provided for citizens to discuss and challenge the then ECK decisions. That the process should be as transparent as possible;
- (c) there should be established an independent commission, the Boundary Review Commission (BRC), with responsibility for establishing, reviewing and drawing new constituency boundaries. The persons appointed to this Commission should be non-partisan (non-political) public officials with some having a background in election administration, geography and statistics and some being retired judges, clergy or other non-partisan citizens. The term of the body should end with establishment of new constituency boundaries. The establishment of constituency boundaries should be separated from the administration and management of elections, the responsibility of the then ECK. Separating the two functions will remove the politics involved in boundary delimitation from the then ECK. Parliament should not have the power to override BRC decisions. Parliamentarians should be allowed to provide their views only before the Commission makes its decision; and
- (d) the first delimitation exercise takes place as soon as possible. Afterwards, delimitation should follow the population census. The delimitation process should be completed at least eighteen months before a general election.¹²

1.2 The Constitution of Kenya (Amendment) Acts No. 10 of 29th December, 2008

16. Against this background of National Accord and Reconciliation, the Statement of Principles on Long-term Issues and Solutions, the national reformation agenda, the aspirations of the Kenya Vision 2030 and in particular the recommendations in the Kriegler Report, the Constitution of Kenya (Amendment) Acts No. 10 of 29th December, 2008 was enacted by Parliament.¹³ This Constitutional amendment had the consequence of:

- (a) establishing the Interim Independent Electoral Commission (IIEC) responsible for interim management and reform of elections and related matters;¹⁴
- (b) establishment of the Interim Independent Boundaries Review Commission (IIBRC) charged with making recommendations to Parliament on delimitation of boundaries for constituencies and local authority electoral units as well as recommendations to Parliament on administrative boundaries including the fixing, reviewing and variation of boundaries of districts and other units, ¹² See page 106 of the Kriegler Report.

- including, performance of such other functions as may be prescribed by Parliament;¹⁵
- (c) establishment of the Interim Independent Constitutional Dispute Resolution Court with exclusive original jurisdiction to hear and determine all and only matters arising from the constitutional review process;¹⁶
 - (d) the provisions amending the Constitution to enable its replacement with a new Constitution of Kenya under the constitutional review process;¹⁷ and
 - (e) the dissolution of the then ECK.¹⁸

1.2.1 Appointment of the Chairman and Members of the IIBRC

17. Following the enactment of the Constitution of Kenya (Amendment) Acts No. 10 of 2008, His Excellency President Mwai Kibaki appointed the Chairman and other eight members of the Commission vide gazette notice No. 4796 of 12th May, 2009. The copy of the gazette notice is attached to this report and marked Annex 1.
18. The selection and appointment of the Chairman and the other members of the Commission was competitive and meritorious in line with the constitutional provisions on the qualifications as they were nominated through a competitive process by the Parliamentary Select Committee and upon approval by the National Assembly they were appointed by His Excellency the President in consultation with the Right Honourable Prime Minister.
19. The Chairman and the other members of the Commission took the oath of office before the Hon. Chief Justice Evan Gicheru on the 18th May, 2009. The work of the Commission therefore commenced about six months late since it had been established on 29th December, 2008 and the Constitution prescribed that its mandate must be delivered within twenty four months or three months after the promulgation of a new Constitution, whichever was earlier.¹⁹ This late commencement of the work of the Commission occasioned serious constraints of time in the delivery of the mandate which entailed nationwide consultations and negotiating compromises to achieve the desired outcomes especially boundaries as bridges for national cohesion.
20. The members of the Commission as appointed were Hon. Mr. Andrew Ndooli Ligale as its Chairman, and the members were Mrs. Jedidah Ntoyai, Ms. Irene Cherop Masit, ¹⁸ Section 2 of the Act introducing a new Section 41 sub-section 14 of the then Constitution.

Mr Mwenda K. Makathimo, Mr. Joseph Kaguthi, Dr John Nkinyangi, Mr Murshid Abdalla Mohamed. Eng. Abdullahi Sharawe and Mrs. Rozaah A. Buyu. Mr. Ezekiel Abang served the Commission as Acting Commission Secretary and Chief Executive Officer until 1st April, 2010 when the Commission appointed Mrs. Catherine A. Kola the Secretary to the Commission and Chief Executive Officer. The list of all the secretariat staff of the Commission is attached to this report marked Annex 2.

21. The work of the Commission including emoluments for Commissioners, staff costs, office space, security, transport, public visits and hearings, survey and Geographical Information Systems (GIS) equipment, Information and Communication Technology (ICT) and all facilitation of the delivery of the mandate were provided by the Government of Kenya (GOK). It is notable that Uraia assisted the IIBRC during the public outreach activities.

1.2.2 Commencement of the Commission Work

22. Upon appointment, the Commission embarked on several working strategies to enable it discharge its mandate. This included securing office space, transport, security, employment of necessary staff, undertaking relevant literature review, gathering background information, formulating organizational structure and Commission procedures, interpreting the mandate and reaching out to key stakeholders and members of the public with a view to informing them about the mandate of the Commission as well as seeking to understand their expectations.
23. At initial stages, the Commission held several meetings with key stakeholders including:
 - (a) the President His Excellency Hon. Mwai Kibaki, and the Prime Minister Rt. Hon. Raila Amolo Odinga on 26th August 2009,
 - (b) the Attorney General Hon. S. Amos Wako on 31st August, 2009;
 - (c) the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Local Government Hon. Musalia Mudavadi on 17th August, 2009;
 - (d) the Minister for Planning, National Development and Kenya Vision 2030 Hon. Wycliffe Oparanya on 26th August 2009;
 - (e) the Minister of State for Provincial Administration and Internal Security Hon. Professor George Saitoti on 11th September, 2009;
 - (f) the National Assembly Departmental Committee on Administration of Justice and Legal Affairs on 17th September, 2009;
 - (g) the Speaker of the National Assembly on 10th September, 2009;
 - (h) attending the National Conference on Electoral Reforms on 14th to 18th August, 2009;
 - (i) launching of the IIBRC Website and Logo on 8th August, 2009; and

- (j) meeting with representatives of Uraia on 1st September, 2009 and who subsequently through their donor funds assisted the IIBRC to undertake civic education on its mandate .
24. Notable is the Joint Induction Retreat for the IIEC and IIBRC held at Naivasha on 6th to 9th July, 2009 which underlined the importance of a clear vision and understanding of the mandate of each of the two Commissions in the context of Constitutional reforms that were delicate and complex to be accomplished within a very short time frame.
25. The IIBRC in its preliminary undertakings formulated its motto, "Boundaries as Bridges for National Cohesion". The IIBRC also formulated its Vision, "A politically stable and prosperous society where electoral and administrative boundaries enhance democracy, good governance and national cohesion that captures the aspirations of the people of Kenya", as well as the Mission, "To redefine Kenya for Kenyans to ensure adequate representation and equitable distribution of resources, taking into account population, population density and trends, diversity and geography in consultation with the people of Kenya." The Commission set out to be guided in its work with the core ethical values of:
- (a) independence;
 - (b) transparency;
 - (c) inclusivity;
 - (d) consultative;
 - (e) impartiality;
 - (f) justice;
 - (g) accountability;
 - (h) equity; and
 - (i) professionalism.
26. The IIBRC recognized at the beginning of its work that the process of delimitation of boundaries for electoral and administrative units was people driven and entailed close consultations with the public including the key stakeholders. In this regard, the Commission undertook provincial visits from 12th October, 2009 to 6th November, 2009 with a view to informing the public the mandate of IIBRC, learning the expectations of the people and laying ground for public hearings which would be undertaken as a major methodology employed by the Commission for public consultations. The programme for the provincial visits is attached to this report and marked Annex 3.

27. During the provincial visits the people expressed their expectations in relation to the mandate of the Commission. The key expectations included:
- (a) delimitation of electoral and administrative boundaries must be such that national cohesion is enhanced to prevent a repeat of violence after general elections;
 - (b) delimitation of the administrative boundaries must be in a manner that promotes the participation of local communities in policy formulation and implementation;
 - (c) delimitation should respect the diversity of the people of Kenya including religious and cultural diversities;
 - (d) observation that the membership of the IIBRC did not include representation of the youth and persons with disabilities and the IIBRC was reminded to consider these two groups in delivery of mandate;
 - (e) in delivery of its mandate IIBRC was expected to address historical injustices of marginalization, unfair resource distribution, socio-political exclusion and related issues;
 - (f) the delimitation process should address legal and administrative obstacles that have disadvantaged certain parts of the country from fair political and economic participation;
 - (g) the recommendations of the Kriegler Commission should be adopted by the IIBRC in delivery of its mandate;
 - (h) the process of delimitation should remove ethnic attitudes from electoral units and promote inter-community harmonious co-existence;
 - (i) persons living in unique settlements such as slum areas, forests, areas of intense security operations, camps for internally displaced persons, pastoral grassing grounds and similar situations be given reasonable chance for representation;
 - (j) the IIBRC should borrow best international practices for achieving fair representation;
 - (k) delimitation of both electoral and administrative boundaries should bear in mind means of transport and communication; and
 - (l) the delivery of the mandate of IIBRC should form a foundation for national healing, reconciliation and moving forward together as a nation.

28. The IIBRC also developed a Communication Strategy for the purpose of the IIBRC's civic education programme.²¹

²¹This was through the assistance of a communication consultant Mr. Kwamchetsi Makokha who was engaged by the IIBRC under a memorandum of co-operation with Uraia donor funds.

1.2.3 The IIBRC's Mandate under the Former Constitution

29. The functions of the IIBRC were spelled out in the Constitution as being responsible for:
- (a) making recommendations to Parliament on the delimitation of constituencies and local authority electoral units and the optimal number of constituencies on the basis of equality of votes taking into account;
 - i. density of population, and in particular the need to ensure adequate representation of urban and sparsely-populated rural areas;
 - ii. population trends;
 - iii. means of communication;
 - iv. geographical features; and
 - v. community interest;
 - (b) making recommendations to Parliament on administrative boundaries, including the fixing, reviewing and variation of boundaries of districts and other units; and
 - (c) the performance of such other functions as may be prescribed by Parliament.²²
30. The IIBRC in relation to making recommendations on the delimitation or drawing of boundaries for constituencies and local authority electoral units considered that the core deliverable would entail making recommendations to Parliament on:
- (a) boundaries for constituencies;
 - (b) names of constituencies;
 - (c) optimal number of constituencies Kenya would be divided into;
 - (d) boundaries for local authority electoral units; and
 - (e) the optimal number and names for local authority electoral units.
31. In relation to the prescribed parameters for making recommendations on delimitation of constituencies and local authority electoral areas, the IIBRC considered the following:
- (a) That the delimitation of constituencies and local authority electoral units was to proceed on the basis of equality of votes. As primary criteria, the IIBRC was to ensure that each vote cast in an election would carry as much weight as far as possible as any other vote cast in the same elections. Thus, under this parameter the IIBRC would set a mechanism of having as far as possible, equal number of voters in every constituency or local authority electoral unit. In that regard, an up to date national voter roll and trends for voter turnout during previous elections would play a critical role.

²² See Section 41C of the former Constitution.

- (b) The IIBRC was constitutionally required to take into account density of population and in particular the need to ensure adequate representation of urban and sparsely-populated rural areas. This criterion therefore required the classification or zoning the entire country into urban, sparsely-populated rural areas and that of areas outside the two classes. In addition, it meant that the IIBRC would consider settlement patterns in terms of inhabitants per unit area so as to achieve equal and fair political representation.
- (c) On the parameter of population trends, the IIBRC considered this to relate to the movement or drifting of population traits especially dynamics in population due to mortality, fertility and migration rates. Thus, the factor of population trends would serve expected changes in voters and population density in constituencies and local authority electoral units. The shifting of population from one constituency to another, demographic trends, the rural-urban migration phenomena or the migration from one area to another in search of employment opportunity or a better life are all part of population trends. For instance, with opening up a new port in an area, one may expect an upsurge of population in that area. In the event of irrigation of arid and semi-arid areas, there can be population movement into such areas. Population trends also includes the rate of population growth.
- (d) On the criterion of means of communication, the IIBRC took the view that communication was about the level of development of infrastructure to facilitate communication and movement of people and goods in an area and its impact on accessibility and delivery of services to the inhabitants concerned by the government. It is about the ease of movement of goods to and from the market areas and the ease of people interacting with their representatives. Thus, delimitation of constituencies and local authority electoral areas must bear in mind the interaction between candidates and voters on the one hand, and, the cost effective management of elections on the other.
- (e) The IIBRC was required to take into account geographical features which include land and water masses, the size of the area and other topographical features mountain ranges, rivers, islands, lakes, craters, forests etc.
- (f) As for the criterion on community of interest, the IIBRC considered that it referred to interests of a group of individuals united by shared needs, values or practices. The shared interests may be the result of a common history or culture, a common background, common religion or language, shared socio-economic status or a combination of any or all of the foregoing.

The above factors were taken into consideration in attempting to achieve the "equality of votes" which may be defined as "one man, one vote" for the purposes of achieving effective representation.

32. The IIBRC was mandated to make recommendations to Parliament on administrative boundaries including the fixing, reviewing and variation of boundaries of districts and other units.²³ The IIBRC considered that 'other units' included administrative units related to districts namely provinces, divisions, locations and sub-locations. The IIBRC further considered that under this mandate its function included the making of policy recommendations that should guide the future fixing, reviewing and variation of boundaries for districts and other administrative units. The IIBRC further took the view that this mandate empowered it to make recommendations on the existing administrative boundaries and related matters such as recommendations on administrative boundary conflicts' resolution and management.

1.2.4 The IIBRC's Mandate under the Constitution of Kenya, 2010

33. Under the Kenya National Dialogue and Reconciliation process, the agreement on Longer-term Issues and Solutions: Constitutional Review Process signed on 4th March, 2008 by Kenya's political leaders had put in place the process for a citizen-participatory process for the review of the Constitution of Kenya. In the event, the Constitution of Kenya (Amendment) Acts No. 10 of 29th December, 2008 provided for comprehensive review and replacement of the Constitution of Kenya.²⁴
34. The Constitution of Kenya Review Process culminated into the ratification of the proposed Constitution of Kenya at the referendum held on 4th August, 2010 and subsequently promulgated by His Excellency President Mwai Kibaki on 27th August, 2010.
35. The new constitution of Kenya had the consequence of modifying the mandate of the IIBRC. In particular it provided that the IIBRC as established under the former Constitution would continue to function as constituted under that Constitution and in terms of sections 41B and 41C but:
- (a) it shall not determine the boundaries of the counties established under the Constitution;
 - (b) it shall determine the boundaries of constituencies and wards using the criteria mentioned in the Constitution; and
 - (c) members of the Commission shall be subject to Chapter Seven of the Constitution.²⁵
36. In addition, the new Constitution provided that:

²³ See Section 41C (b).

²⁴ See Section 5 of the Act.

²⁵ See Section 27 (1) (a), (b) and (c) of the Sixth Schedule of the Constitution.

- (a) the requirement in Article 89 (2) that a review of constituency and ward boundaries shall be completed at least twelve months before a general election does not apply to the review of boundaries preceding the first elections under the Constitution; and
 - (b) the IIBRC shall ensure that the first review of constituencies undertaken in terms of the Constitution shall not result in the loss of a constituency existing on the effective date.²⁶
37. In view of the provisions of the Constitution, the IIBRC considered that the deliverables in the discharge of its mandate had been modified under the new Constitutional dispensation, the Commission continued to work towards full delivery of its mandate on the basis that its modified functions included:
- (a) to determine by publishing in the Gazette the names and boundaries of the 290 constituencies prescribed in the Constitution for single member elected for representation in the National Assembly;
 - (b) to determine by publishing in the Gazette the optimal numbers, names and boundaries of wards for single member elected for representation in the county assemblies;
 - (c) making recommendations to Parliament on administrative boundaries, including the fixing, reviewing and variation of boundaries of districts and other units; and
 - (d) the performance of such other functions as may be prescribed by Parliament.
38. As for the mandate under the former Constitution, the IIBRC reckoned that under the new Constitutional dispensation, the transitional provisions were that the local authorities established under the Local Government Act (Cap 265) existing before the Promulgation date of 27th August, 2010 would continue to exist subject to any law that might be enacted.²⁷ In addition, the Commission noted that in line with the transitional provisions, the Constitution provided for making of national legislation to provide for the governance and management of urban areas and cities.²⁸ Accordingly, the IIBRC considered that its function to make recommendations to Parliament on delimitation of local authority electoral units had been rendered nugatory save for general policy recommendations consistent with the provisions of the Constitution on urban areas and cities in so far as their governance may be affected by the decisions of the IIBRC in delivery of the modified mandate.

²⁶ See Section 27 (3) and (4) of the Sixth Schedule of the Constitution.

²⁷ See Section 18 of the Sixth Schedule of the Constitution.

²⁸ See Articles 184 and 200 of the Constitution.

39. As for the criteria to be applied in the determination of the names and boundaries of constituencies as well as the optimal number, names and boundaries of the wards for election to county assemblies, the IIBRC was bound to apply the criteria prescribed in the Constitution and which included that:²⁹
- (a) there shall be two hundred and ninety constituencies for the purposes of the election of the members of the National Assembly;
 - (b) the review of the names and boundaries of constituencies shall be at intervals of not less than eight years and not more than twelve years and any review shall be completed at least twelve months before a general election of member of Parliament (but this parameter did not apply to the current transitional determination of names and boundaries of constituencies by the IIBRC as per the transitional provisions already cited);
 - (c) the number, names and boundaries of wards shall be reviewed periodically (in which case IIBRC was entitled to determine the number, names and boundaries of wards under the current transitional constitutional provisions);
 - (d) where a general election is to be held within twelve months after the completion of a review by the Commission, the new boundaries shall not take effect for purposes of that election (but this requirement did not apply to the boundaries of constituencies and wards determined by the IIBRC pursuant to the transitional constitutional provisions);
 - (e) the boundaries of each constituency shall be such that the number of inhabitants in the constituency is, as nearly as possible, equal to the population quota but the number of inhabitants of a constituency may be greater or lesser than the population quota in the manner specified in the Constitution to take account of:
 - i. geographical features and urban centres;
 - ii. community of interest, historical, economic and cultural ties; and
 - iii. means of communication;
 - (f) the number of inhabitants of a constituency or ward may be greater or lesser than the population quota by a margin of not more than:
 - i. forty percent for cities and sparsely-populated areas; and
 - ii. thirty percent for the other areas;
 - (g) in reviewing constituency and ward boundaries the Commission shall:
 - i. consult all interested parties; and
 - ii. progressively work towards ensuring that the number of inhabitants in each constituency and ward is, as nearly as possible, equal to the population quota;
 - (h) the IIBRC was at liberty to alter, if necessary, the names and boundaries of constituencies, and the number, names and boundaries of wards;

²⁹ See Article 89 of the Constitution on delimitation of electoral units.

- (i) the IIBRC was mandated to determine and publish in the Gazette the names and details of the boundaries of constituencies and wards and the names and boundaries shall come into effect in the first general elections under the new Constitution;
 - (j) any person may apply to the High Court for review of a decision of the IIBRC made in the discharge of the function of determination of boundaries for constituencies and wards in which case the Court shall hear and determine such application within three months of the date on which it is filed;
 - (k) population quota in the delimitation process means the number obtained by dividing the number of inhabitants of Kenya by the number of constituencies or wards, as the case may be into which Kenya is divided; and
 - (l) as per the transitional provisions in the Constitution, the IIBRC shall ensure that the delimitation process shall not result in the loss of a constituency existing on the effective date.
40. While the function of the IIBRC under the former Constitution on making recommendations on boundaries for districts and other units was carried forward under the new constitutional dispensation, the IIBRC considered that it would proceed cautiously in making the recommendations in view of the transitional provision that within five years after the effective date, the national government shall restructure the system of administration commonly known as the Provincial Administration to accord with and respect the system of devolved government established under the new dispensation.³⁰ Thus, the IIBRC's recommendations had to bear in mind the transitional provisions and their effect within the general framework of devolved government as provided for in the Constitution.

1.3 Methodology and Work Plan

1.3.1 Methodology

41. The methodology and work plan of the IIBRC was based on the provisions of a Concept Paper which the IIBRC formulated. Although some aspects of the methodology and the work plan were amended owing to the changing circumstances, it constituted the basic theoretical framework the IIBRC employed to perform its functions. The Concept Paper was formulated by the Commissioners of the IIBRC working in four Task Teams namely:
- (a) Task Team on Research, Legal and Documentation whose members were Commissioners Joseph Kaguthi and Irene Masit whose work concerned legal framework and collection, analysis, interpretation and presentation of data;

³⁰ See Section 17 of the Sixth Schedule of the new Constitution.

- (b) Task Team on Communication (Civic Education, Advocacy, Induction and Stakeholders) whose members were Commissioners Mohamed Murshid and Rozaah Buyu charged with the broad objectives of sensitizing the general public and stakeholders on the mandate of the IIBRC, providing Kenyans an opportunity to contribute their views and to own the process of review of the boundaries, and to inculcate a sense of nationalism throughout the process of delivery of the mandate,
- (c) Task Team on Methodology and Technical aspects whose members were Commissioners Dr. John Nkinyangi and Mwenda Makathimo whose responsibility was integration of the different work plans on to a coherent framework for implementing the mandate of the IIBRC; and
- (d) Task Team on Finance and Administration whose members were Commissioners Jedidah Ntoya and Eng. Abdullahi M. Sharawe responsible for the ways and means of applying and managing the human, financial, technical and other resources at the disposal of the IIBRC to ensure the fulfilment of its mandate.

42. The methodology of the IIBRC entailed

- (a) Collection of data and information on past and recent creation of electoral and administrative boundaries in Kenya including review of the relevant literature, consideration of prevailing social economic and political context, historical evolution of boundaries in Kenya and comparative international experience on delimitation of electoral and administrative boundaries.
- (b) Collection of baseline population data covering dimensions such as population density, demographic trends and historical as well as socio-cultural ties, community interest, means of communication, geographical features, economic and natural resources and levels of development.
- (c) Collaboration with stakeholders including relevant government departments, national institutions and professionals especially on data collection and information gathering in areas relevant to the mandate.

43. Of particular emphasis is that the IIBRC employed the methodology of public hearings as a tool for both facilitating consultation on its mandate and for gathering and compiling relevant information from the general public on matters of concern on delimitation of boundaries. The public hearings promoted advocacy, awareness-raising and building consensus on the electoral reform process. In particular, the public hearings afforded the IIBRC unrivalled opportunity on a nation-wide scale to engage in public information, civic education and receiving public views on issues related to its mandate. The objectives, procedures and principles guiding the public hearings were determined and published by the IIBRC beforehand and these are attached to this report as Annex 4.

44. To ensure maximum benefit of the public hearings to the delivery of the mandate, the IIBRC formulated a checklist of documents and materials to be used, provided for rapporteurs' briefing notes, terms of reference for the rapporteurs and used verbatim audio-visual recording of all the proceedings.
45. The IIBRC undertook literature review on internationally accepted standards on delimitation of electoral boundaries and identified five internationally accepted principles for the delimitation namely:
 - (a) community of interest (also known as representativeness);
 - (b) equality of votes (also known as equality of voting strength);
 - (c) independent or impartial boundary delimitation authority (such as the IIBRC as established in Kenya's circumstance);
 - (d) transparency (implying that the delimitation process should be as transparent as possible, with the methodology and guidelines clearly established and publicized in advance); and
 - (e) non-discrimination (indicating that electoral boundaries should not be drawn in a manner that discriminates against any particular group).

Throughout the delivery of the mandate, the IIBRC sought to uphold these international principles as far as possible within the Kenya's circumstances especially the Constitutional parameters for delimitation of electoral boundaries.

46. The IIBRC analyzed and interpreted data and information relying on social science methodologies and analytical tools including Information Communication Technologies (ICT) as well as Geographical Information Systems (GIS).

1.3.2 Work Plan

47. The Concept Paper also provided for elaborate work plans including timelines for activities and resource implications. The IIBRC endeavoured to deliver as planned within the resources that were available and within the changing demands of the mandate as per the new Constitution.
48. Generally, the methodology and work plans of the IIBRC focused on re-establishing trust and credibility in Kenya's electoral process with emphasis on transparency, feedback, consultations and commitment to independent and objective decision making as key indicators of the IIBRC's dedication to rejuvenating democracy and human dignity in Kenya.

1.3.3 Rules and Procedures of Meetings

- 49 The Constitution provided that subject to the independence of the IIBRC in the discharge of its mandate, Parliament may provide for the orderly and effective conduct of the operations and business of the IIBRC and for the powers of the Commission to appoint staff and establish committees and regulate their procedure³¹ Thus, the IIBRC took initiative and caused the drafting of the proposed Interim Independent Boundaries Review Commission Bill, 2009 but owing to the fast dynamics of the reform process this proposal never came to be enacted by Parliament.
- 50 In conducting its business, the IIBRC was guided by the provisions of the Constitution that the IIBRC may, subject to its rules of procedure, act notwithstanding a vacancy in its membership or the absence of a member and its proceedings would not be invalidated by presence or participation of a person not entitled to the present or to participate, and provided, any decision of the IIBRC shall require the concurrence of a majority of all its members.³² This provision therefore had the effect of empowering the IIBRC to determine the rules and procedures for transacting its business. Accordingly, the IIBRC made the following rules of procedure for its meetings
- (a) The Commission shall hold meetings on notice from the Secretary
 - (b) The meetings shall be presided over by the Chairman of the Commission and in his absence he shall nominate one from among the members to preside over the meeting.
 - (c) The Secretary or any other authorized officer of the Commission shall take the minutes of Commission meetings.
 - (d) Meetings of the Commission shall be conducted with decorum at all times and members shall carry themselves with all due respect and courtesy.
 - (e) Members of the Commission shall treat all matters deliberated and handled within the auspices of the Commission with the strictest confidence at all times.
 - (f) The Chairperson and/or one of the members nominated by the other Commissioners shall be the spokespersons for the Commission with regard to making public statements on its matters.
 - (g) The quorum for Commission meetings shall be five (5) members.
 - (h) Decisions of the Commission in meetings shall be by consensus, and in its absence by a majority of the Commissioners.
 - (i) The Commission shall set up Committees or Task Teams which shall be subservient to it and which shall perform the duties specifically allocated to them.

³¹ See Section 41B (9) of the former Constitution

³² See Section 41B (10) of the former Constitution

- (j) The Commission may, subject to its rules of procedure, act notwithstanding a vacancy in its membership or the absence of a member and its proceedings shall not be invalidated by the presence or participation of a person not entitled to be present at or to participate in those proceedings; provided that any decision of the Commission shall require the concurrence of a majority of all the members thereof.
- (k) Any circumstances not elaborated in the present Rules of Procedure shall be determined by the Commission as and when they arise.
- (l) The Commission may amend these Rules at any time.

1.4 Public Outreach

- 51. The IIBRC's public outreach employed three strategic approaches at the start of its work. These included communication, civic education and public awareness.

1.4.1 Communication Strategy

- 52. A Communication Strategy for IIBRC was developed to reach out to the stakeholders and the general public. A number of activities were undertaken to enhance publicity and visibility for the IIBRC in a bid to reach and engage all its stakeholders to influence their perceptions, and to gain not only their involvement but also their support. The strategy also aimed at securing public ownership of the IIBRC's work.
- 53. Accordingly, the strategy established a set of deliberate plans and actions to ensure that information reached the target groups was persuasive and achieved the desired actions
- 54. The strategy was informed by basic research to identify the stakeholders and the most appropriate media to reach them. The local media was analyzed to establish its reach and the most appropriate media for communication were identified and employed by the IIBRC to reach stakeholders and the general public.
- 55. Some of the public outreach activities included:
 - (a) a joint national conference on electoral reforms with the IIEC to unveil their teams and outline their missions;
 - (b) corporate image making through the design and unveiling of the IIBRC's logo;
 - (c) publishing of a brochure outlining its mandate;
 - (d) development of the IIBRC website (www.iibrc.go.ke);
 - (e) sensitization meeting for the Editor's Guild³³;
 - (f) content analyses of print media coverage of the IIBRC (Daily Nation and the Standard);
 - (g) targeted media plan (electronic and print);

³³ Breakfast meeting, Serena Hotel 9th October 2009

- (h) media buying schedules;
- (i) the redesign and re-editing the IIBRC's information brochure;
- (j) content development for infomercials and advertisements used for public outreach;
- (k) used print and electronic media for mobilization during the public hearings and civic education forums by publicizing the activities, venues and schedules of the exercises;
- (l) participation in the 2010 Nairobi Trade Fair; and
- (m) media monitoring was done through media reviews of coverage in the Newspaper, radio and television in order to respond when necessary. See Annex 5 for vernacular, regional and community radio stations used.

1.4.2 Civic Education

56. The goal of the civic education was to train and equip the opinion leaders and the general public with the requisite skills on the process of delimitation of boundaries so as to enable them to submit their views as required by the Constitution. To achieve this IIBRC targeted various primary stakeholders namely; the general public (Wananchi), Community Based Organizations, Faith Based Organizations, Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs), Religious leaders, Civil leaders, Administrators, Trainers of Trainers (ToTs), businessmen, the Marginalized, Women, Men, Male Youth, Female Youths, People With Disabilities (PWD) and other minority groups.
57. The general objectives of the Civic Education strategy were to:
- (a) inform the members of the public on the mandate of IIBRC;
 - (b) educate the public on the criteria to be taken into considerations during delimitation;
 - (c) empower them to proactively participate in the delimitation process;
 - (d) heighten interest in the boundary delimitation exercise;
 - (e) evoke thoughts and start debates around boundary delimitation and consolidate community aspirations through consolidation of interests in presentations and submissions to the IIBRC.
58. Twenty civic educators through Uraia, from diverse groups were tasked to fast track civic education activities for the purpose of standardizing the public information without compromising the quality of the awareness and sensitization sessions in the community for eight months. Numerous civic education sessions were held by the IIBRC involving a total 1,500,000 people directly.
59. In general, the following outcomes were achieved:
- (a) work plans were developed and implemented;

- (b) the coverage areas were mapped and organizations that provide civic education identified;
- (c) civic education materials including brochures were effectively disseminated;
- (d) civic education was conducted widely especially of councillors and Trainers of Trainers;
- (e) alliances with civil society organizations (CSO) that have interest in boundary review formed;
- (f) awareness and sensitization on the boundary review issues to the general public created, which increased the attendance at the public hearings;
- (g) partnered with several stakeholders who facilitated communication and dissemination of information;
- (h) increased enlightenment of the people and knowledgeable about factors to be taken into considerations in delimitation of both administrative and administrative boundaries; and
- (i) the participants gained more knowledge and skills on how they could mobilize residents from their respective areas in inviting informative memorandum to be submitted to IIBRC.

1.4.3 Public Awareness

60. The IIBRC embarked on an exercise to sensitize, consult and create public awareness using various media to reach its principal stakeholders. Various methodologies were used to actively engage the participants and to effectively ensure successful environment that facilitated discussion of IIBRC mandate. A number of methods were used to enhance public awareness including press conferences, talk shows, public lectures, public debates, community barazas and workshops.

1.5 Information and Data Collection

61. The IIBRC undertook information and data collection to inform its work. This involved stakeholder consultations, visits to pertinent ministries and departments, electronic research, use of information from the defunct ECK, and IIEC.

1.5.1 Review of Relevant Documents

62. The IIBRC undertook a comprehensive literature review covering maps and archival data on boundaries and boundary delimitation within in Kenya, and on international best practices.

1.5.2 Stakeholder Consultations

63. The IIBRC consulted the two principals, the parliament, judiciary, professional societies, civil society, private sector and the Kenyan people during its work. This was done through provincial visits, interactive radio and television shows and closed door hearings. The IIBRC also held meetings and consulted key institutions to access data pertinent its work. This included the Ministry of Planning, National Development and Vision 2030 and in particular the Kenya National Bureau of Statistics (KNBS), Ministry of Lands especially the Survey of Kenya, Regional Centre for Resource Mapping for Development (RCRMD) and Department for Resource Surveys and Remote Sensing (DRSRS), IIEC, Communications Commission of Kenya (CCK), Ministry of Roads, Ministry of State for Provincial Administration and Internal Security, Ministry of Local Government, National Assembly and the National Archives.

1.5.3 Public Hearings

64. The IIBRC sensitized and consulted the public and key stakeholders throughout the country on the review of boundaries by holding public hearings during which they made submissions.
65. The public hearings were held between February and May 2010. The programme of the countrywide sittings is attached as Annex 4. The public hearings were a key method of collecting information on agreed positions on suggestions for boundaries variation, creation of new electoral units and administrative boundaries. Before the hearings, civic education was conducted on IIBRC's mandate and parameters to be considered during the delimitation to enable them participate effectively.

1.6 Data Analysis, Interpretation and Presentation

66. The IIBRC analyzed, interpreted and presented data collected relating to its mandated using social science techniques with assistance of ICT including GIS.

1.6.1 Analysis

67. The IIBRC analyzed data on the basis of the criteria provided for in the Constitution, and as amplified by its operational guidelines attached as Annex 6.³⁴
68. In view of the Constitutional provisions on the use of population quota, the IIBRC analyzed population data using the appropriate method, in consideration of the population quota and the other Constitutional parameters, to yield the fairest distribution of the 290 constituencies. The method the IIBRC used in this regard is attached as Annex 7.
69. In view of the Constitutional provisions the IIBRC in consideration of the population quota and the other Constitutional parameters, datasets on geography and urban centres, means of communications and economic ties were visualized in the GIS to support decision-making in determination of the boundaries. In appropriate cases, the IIBRC applied the principle of judicial notice in cases where the facts on these parameters were obvious.

³⁴ See Article 89 on the applicable parameters for delimitation of Constituencies and Wards.

70. Qualitative data from public hearings, stakeholder consultations and memorandum were analyzed in relation to the parameters of community of interest, historical, economic and cultural ties with the assistance of an analysis matrix attached as Annex 8.
71. The IIBRC analyzed the historical evolution of administrative boundaries and taking into account the submissions by the people, and the stakeholder views, and made the relevant recommendations to Parliament on administrative boundaries, including the fixing, reviewing and variation of boundaries of districts and other units.

1.6.2 Interpretation of Data

74. The IIBRC interpreted both quantitative and qualitative data, incorporating all constitutional parameters for delimitation of constituencies and wards. The interpretation took into consideration the community interests so as to assure national cohesion in the final delimitation.
75. As for the public submissions, the IIBRC interpreted the views of the people including key stakeholders by applying a formal methodology of evaluating the opinions, evidence available and having ascertained the facts, applied the constitutional criteria with a view to arriving at a balanced decision towards the delivery of its mandate.

1.6.3 Presentation

76. The IIBRC developed documentation and information management policy guidelines, whose objectives were
 - (a) safe custody of records;
 - (b) record management maintained especially as a system for classification and retrieval,
 - (c) retrieval of records with minimal delay; and
 - (d) succession management to ensure institutional information continuity.
77. The IIBRC, in line with the policy guidelines established a central depository centre, for the safe custody and retrieval of maps and records of public hearings and consultations, including hansard reports, memoranda, and analytical reports by each rapporteur during public hearings, and audio visual record of the proceedings. The relevant laws of Kenya, Government reports and sessional papers were also put in safe custody at the resource centre
78. The IIBRC planned and secured its maps and toposheets as cartographic materials forming the political maps of Kenya. These would be preserved by lamination, microfilming and scanning, and then catalogued with proper bibliographical descriptions for easy retrieval and use in future delimitation processes. Nevertheless, it is notable, that owing to time constraints, that was an exercise the IIBRC did not fully accomplish but put in place technical staff and other enabling resources in anticipation of the completion of this important work upon the maps relating to its mandate being produced

79. The IIBRC stored relevant available maps of significance to its mandate in map cabinets and secured copies in digital format (pdf format) This extensive map collection is secured at the IIBRC offices.
80. The IIBRC acquired spatial data visualization and map making equipment and software, and also statistical packages to aid in its work on data presentation. This included latest GIS software (ArcGIS, ERDAS and ENVI), SPSS, and computers including a high end central server It is also notable that the IIBRC used the available plotter (HP Designjet 5500) for map output.
81. As for the final delimitation of constituencies, the IIBRC presented its decisions by way of publication in the gazette, as prescribed in the constitution.
82. As for the final recommendations on boundaries for Districts and other administrative units, the IIBRC presented its recommendations as set out in this report

1.7 Challenges and limitations

83. Upon appointment, the IIBRC faced several operational and logistical challenges for smooth and expeditious delivery of its mandate. In particular, the IIBRC took considerable time to engage the necessary professional and technical staff whose services were crucial³⁵. The delays in employing staff were partly due to the absence of the relevant Act of Parliament which was meant to guide the process that was never enacted despite the IIBRC's initiatives in that regard³⁶. This coupled with time taken to competitively nominate the chairman and other members of the IIBRC leading to their appointment, after a lapse of about six months, meant that the IIBRC would be seriously constrained in terms of time³⁷.
84. The Constitution envisaged that Parliament would make legislation for the orderly and effective conduct of the operations and business of the IIBRC³⁸. Parliament having not ³⁵ The professional and technical staff came on board on 1st April 2010.

³⁶ Section 41B (9) of the former Constitution envisaged that Parliament would make legislation for the powers of the Commission to appoint staff and in absence of such legislation, the IIBRC spent considerable time including consultations with the Ministry of State for Public Service on the issue of its staff establishment and terms of service

³⁷ The Chairman and other members were appointed on 12th May 2009 under Gazette notice No. 4796 of 12th May 2009

³⁸ Section 41B (9) of the former constitution

enacted the relevant law, the IIBRC was constrained with respect to key operational definitions for which such legislation would have offered the necessary guidance. For example the IIBRC was required to undertake delimitation of electoral units on the basis of equality of votes taking into account, “density of population, and in particular the need to ensure adequate representation of urban and sparsely-populated rural areas”³⁹. Thus such legislation would have gone a long way in assisting in the definition of the population figures to be used, the meaning of urban areas, and the meaning of sparsely-populated rural areas. In these circumstances, the IIBRC spent considerable time consulting and defining critical operational guidelines.

85. The IIBRC operated under a dynamic environment of national reforms and fluid period of tenure for the delivery of its mandate⁴⁰. Accordingly, the IIBRC work plans and methodologies constantly changed to keep abreast with the uncertainties of its tenure.
86. The notable national reform with far-reaching impact on the IIBRC was the promulgation of the new constitution of Kenya which came into effect on 27th August 2010 following its ratification at the referendum of 4th August 2010. In this regard, the mandate of IIBRC was modified in terms of the deliverables of its work. Thus, instead of making recommendations to Parliament on delimitation of electoral boundaries, the IIBRC was now mandated to determine the names and boundaries of a fixed two hundred and ninety constituencies as well as the optimal number, names and boundaries of wards, and, publish these details in the Gazette. In addition, the population quota was prescribed as a key parameter in the determination of boundaries for constituencies and wards. Another important modification entailed clear provisions for questioning decisions of the IIBRC by way of application for judicial review in the High Court⁴¹.

³⁹ Section 41C (a)(i) of the former constitution.

⁴⁰ Section 41B (11) of the former constitution provided that, the IIBRC shall stand dissolved 24 months from 29th December 2008, being the date of its establishment, or, 3 months after the promulgation of a new constitution.

2.0 Chapter Two – Historical Background

87. Kenya has undergone considerable changes in its boundaries from historical times. Available oral and recorded history referred to tribal enclaves and kingdoms that had boundaries marked by physical features, such as rivers, mountains, plains, oceans, certain trees and other markings that were shared and respected by the various neighbours.

2.1 Historical Background of Internal Boundaries of Kenya

88. However towards the end of the 14th century foreign groups such as the Portuguese, the Arabs, and Italian, British and German interests started carving outside enclaves within the coast line and eventually moved inland.
89. Portuguese rule in East Africa focused mainly on a coastal strip centred in Mombasa. The Portuguese presence in East Africa officially began after 1505, when flagships under the command of Don Francisco de Almeida conquered Kilwa, an island located in what is now southern Tanzania.

Portugal's main goal in the east coast of Africa was to take control of the spice trade from the Arabs. Their presence in East Africa served the purposes of controlling trade within the Indian Ocean and securing the sea routes linking Europe to Asia. Portuguese naval vessels were very disruptive to the commerce of Portugal's enemies within the western Indian Ocean and were able to demand high tariffs on items transported through the sea due to their strategic control of ports and shipping lanes. The construction of Fort Jesus in Mombasa in 1593 was meant to solidify Portuguese hegemony in the region. Portuguese East Africa stretched from Sofala in present day Mozambique to Mogadishu. Sketch 1 on the left shows

Portuguese East Africa between 1510 and 1690.

90. The Omani Arabs posed the most direct challenge to Portuguese influence in East Africa and besieged Portuguese fortresses, openly attacked naval vessels and expelled the Portuguese from the Kenyan and Tanzanian coasts by 1730. By this time, the Portuguese Empire had already lost its interest on the spice trade sea route due to the decreasing profitability of that business. The Arabs reclaimed much of the Indian Ocean trade, forcing the Portuguese to retreat south where they remained in Portuguese East Africa (Mozambique) as sole rulers until the 1975 independence of Mozambique.
91. Omani Arab colonization of the Kenyan and Tanzanian coasts brought the once independent city-states under closer foreign scrutiny and domination than was experienced during the Portuguese period. Like their predecessors, the Omani Arabs were primarily able only to control the coastal areas, not the interior. However, the creation of clove plantations, intensification of the slave trade and relocation of the Omani capital to Zanzibar in 1839 by Seyyid Said had the effect of consolidating the Omani power in the region.

92. Arab governance of all the major ports along the East African coast continued until British interests aimed particularly at ending the slave trade and creation of a wage-labour system began to put pressure on Omani rule.

By the late nineteenth century, the slave trade on the open seas had been completely outlawed by the British and the Omani Arabs had little ability to resist the British navy's ability to enforce the directive. The Omani presence continued in Zanzibar and Pemba until the 1964 revolution, but the official Omani Arab presence in Kenya was checked by German and British seizure of key ports and creation of crucial trade alliances with influential local leaders in the 1880s. Sketch 2 on

93. The rise of European influence towards the end of the 17th century saw the dissolution of the Sultanate of Zanzibar and the East African continental shelf was put under various European blockades mainly the British, Italian, German and the Portuguese as shown in Sketch 3 below.

94. European missionaries began settling in the area from Mombasa to Mount Kilimanjaro in the 1840s, nominally under the protection of the Sultan of Zanzibar. In 1886 the British government encouraged William Mackinnon, who already had an agreement with the Sultan and whose shipping company traded extensively in East Africa, to establish British influence in the region. He formed a British East Africa Association which led to the Imperial British East Africa Company being chartered in 1888 and given the original grant to administer the dependency. It administered about 150 miles (240 km) of coastline stretching from the River Tana via Mombasa to German East Africa which were leased from the Sultan. The British "sphere of influence", agreed at the Berlin Conference of 1885, to extend up the coast and inland across the future Kenya and after 1890 included Uganda as well. Mombasa was the administrative centre at this time.

95. However, the company began to fail, and on 1st July 1895 the British government proclaimed a protectorate, the administration being transferred to the Foreign Office. In 1902 administration was again transferred to the Colonial Office and the Uganda territory was incorporated as part of the protectorate. In 1902, the East Africa Syndicate received a grant of 500 square miles (804 km²) in order to promote white settlement in the Highlands. The capital was shifted from Mombasa to Nairobi in 1905 and in 1906 an Order in Council constituted the administrator (a governor) and provided for legislative and executive councils. Lieutenant Colonel J. Hayes Sadler was the first governor and commander in chief. On 23 July 1920 the protectorate became the Kenya Colony. The area put under the British protectorate was comprised of the area known today as Kenya, Uganda, Parts of South Sudan and Somalia as shown in Sketch 4 below.

96. Sketch 5 below is an illustration of how Kenyan boundaries and those of her neighbours looked like between 1945 and 1964, and up to the collapse of the East African Community in 1977.

2.1.1 Administrative Boundaries

97. Boundary administration for Kenya dates back to 1902. The boundaries underwent several changes between 1902 and 1933, to finally result in the pre-independence boundaries of 1962. (See map 1 below).

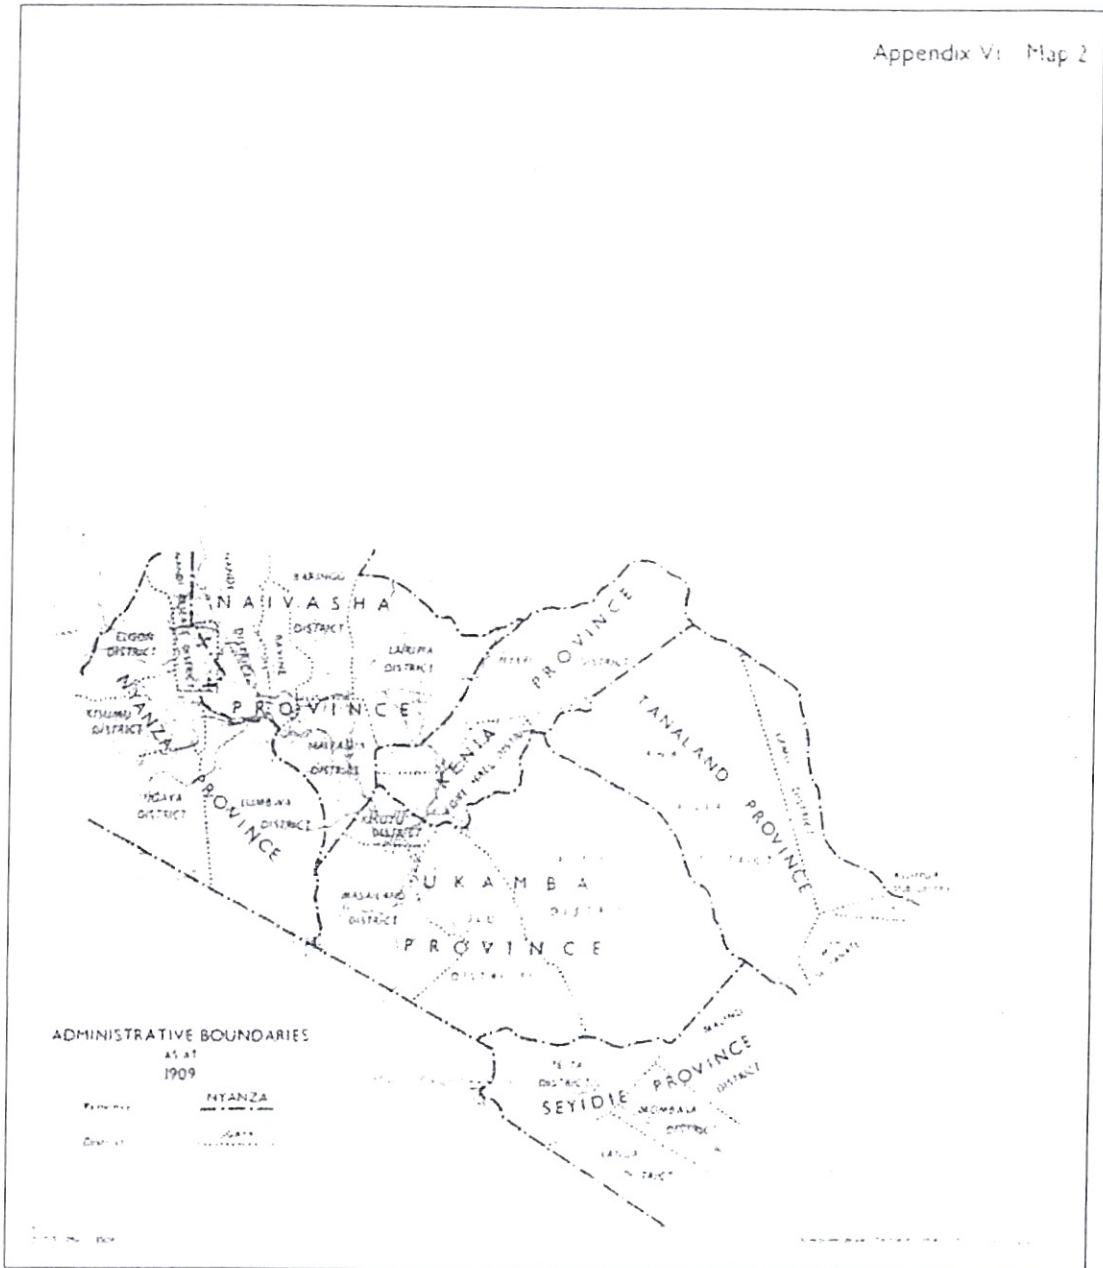

Map 1: The East African Protectorate before 1902

98. Before 1902, the boundary of the East African Protectorate ran from Lake Rudolf (Lake Turkana) in the north along the eastern wall of the Rift Valley leaving Lakes Sugota, Baringo, Hannington, Elementeita and Naivasha as well as most of the present Rift Valley province and all Nyanza province and Turkana in the Uganda Protectorate. (See map 2 below).

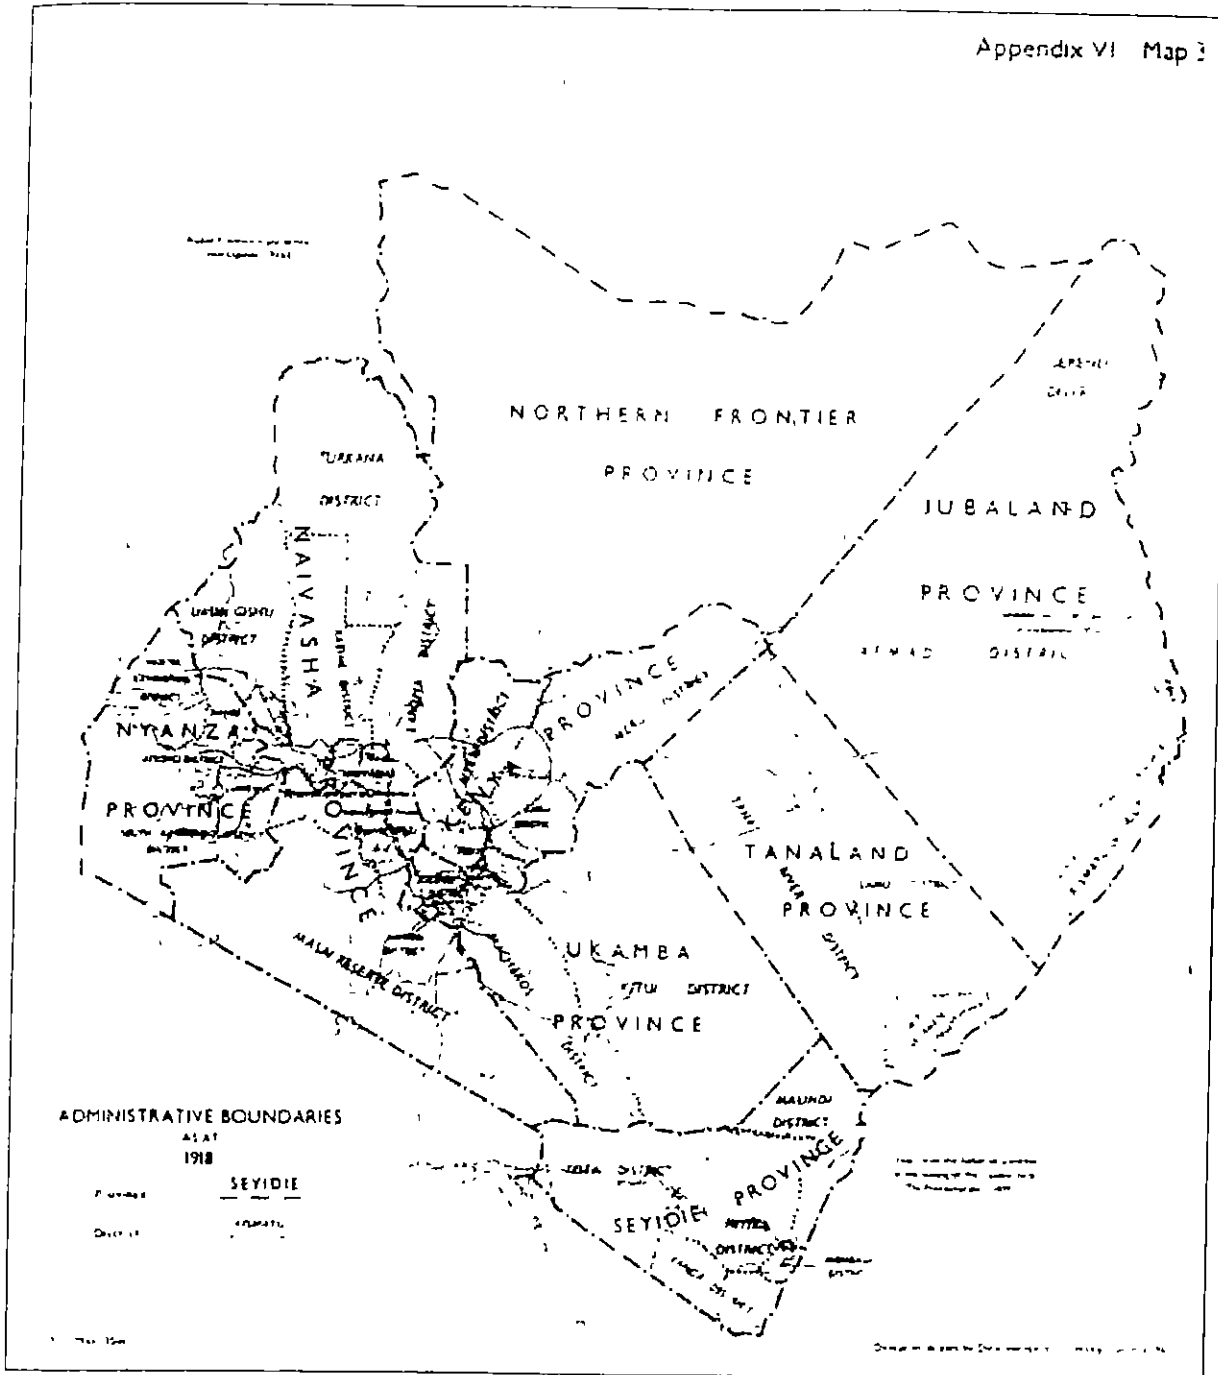

Map 2: Administrative boundaries as at 1909

99. By 1909, the country had been divided into Nyanza, Naivasha "Kenia", Ukamba, Tanaland, and Seyidie provinces. (See map 3 below).

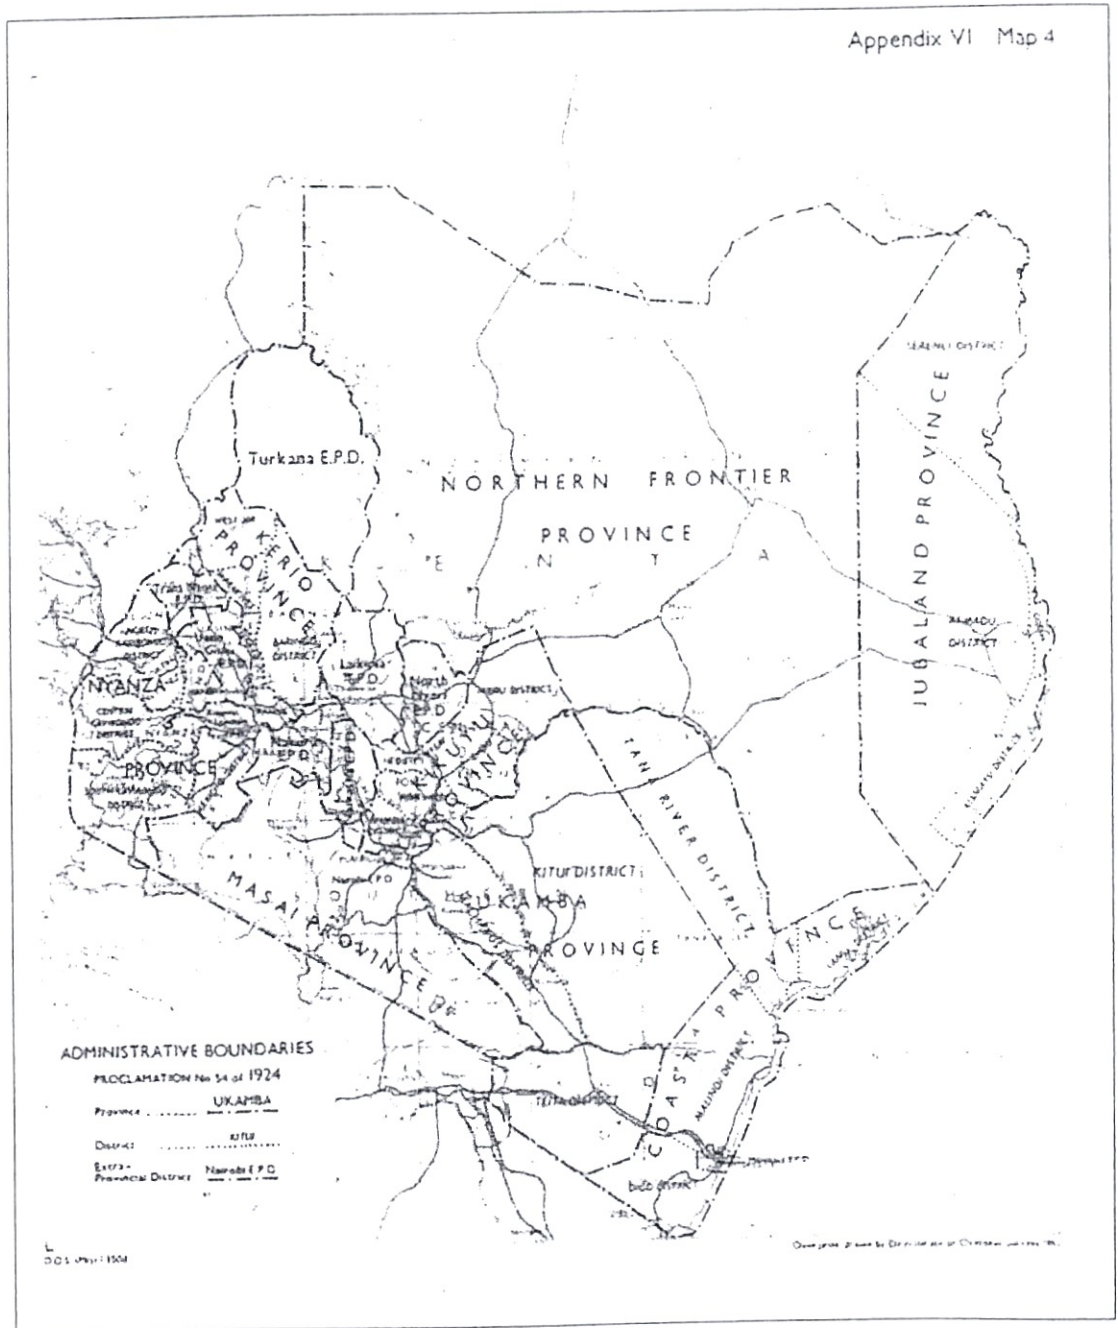

Map 3: Administrative boundaries as at 1918

Appendix VI Map 3

100. By 1918, the Northern Frontier and Jubaland Provinces had been added and Naivasha Province at that time stretched from Lake Rudolf to the German border and included Southern Turkana and Masai. (See map 4 below).

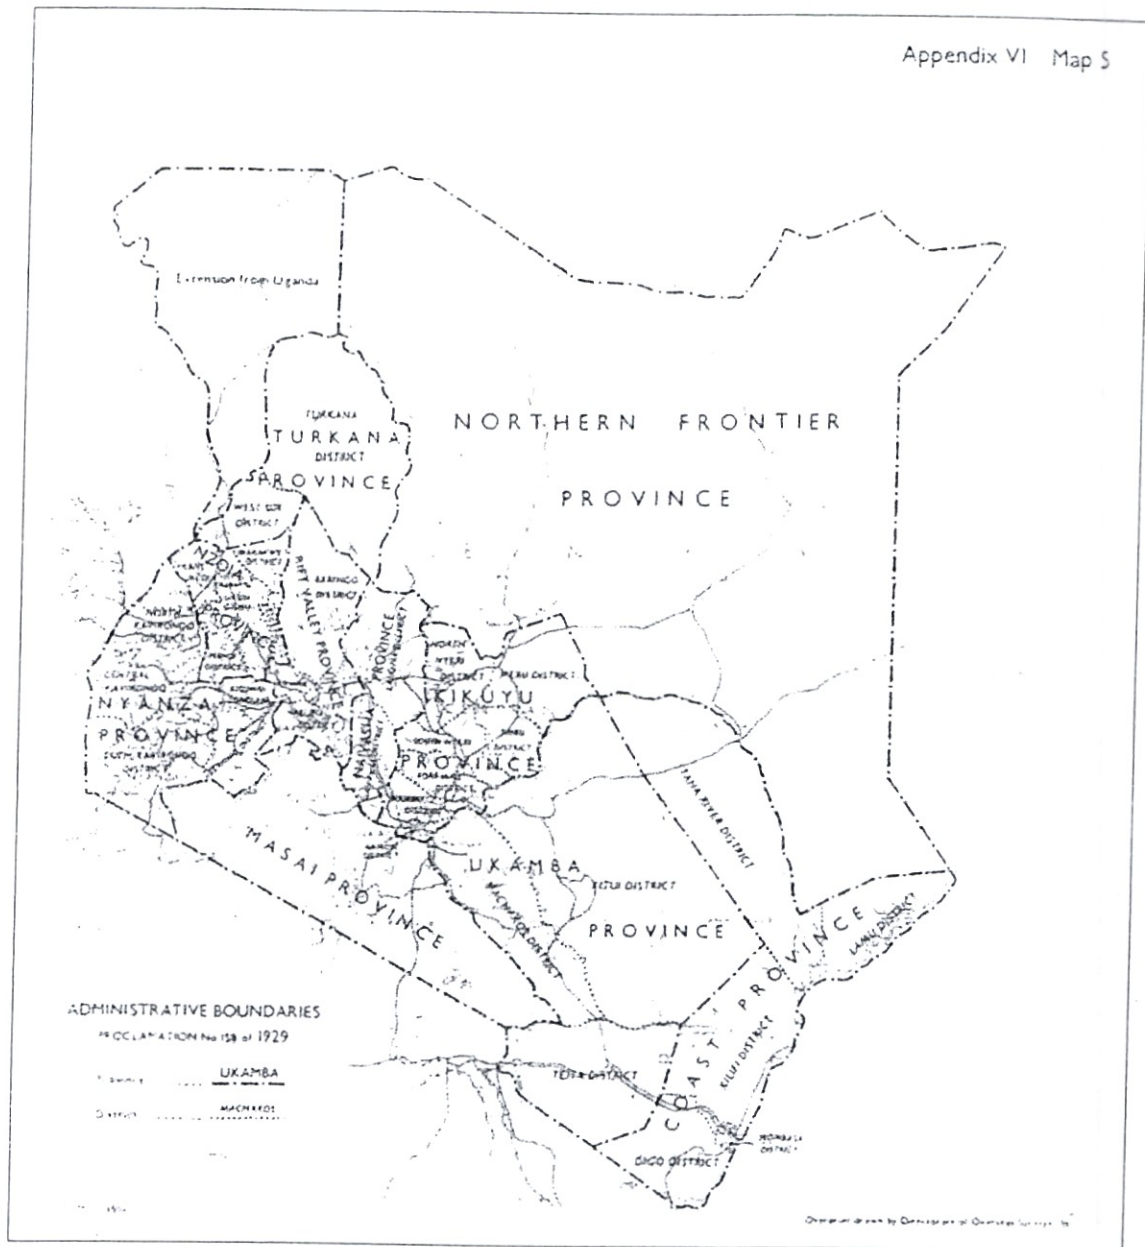

Map 4: Administrative boundaries as at 1924

101. By 1924, the Provinces had again been changed to Nyanza, Kerio, Masai, Kikuyu, Ukamba, Northern Frontier, Jubaland, and Coast. There were also 9 extra-provincial districts consisting of Turkana, Trans Nzoia, Uasin Gishu, Kisumu-Londiani, Nakuru, Laikipia, Naivasha, North Nyeri, and Nairobi. (See map 5 below).

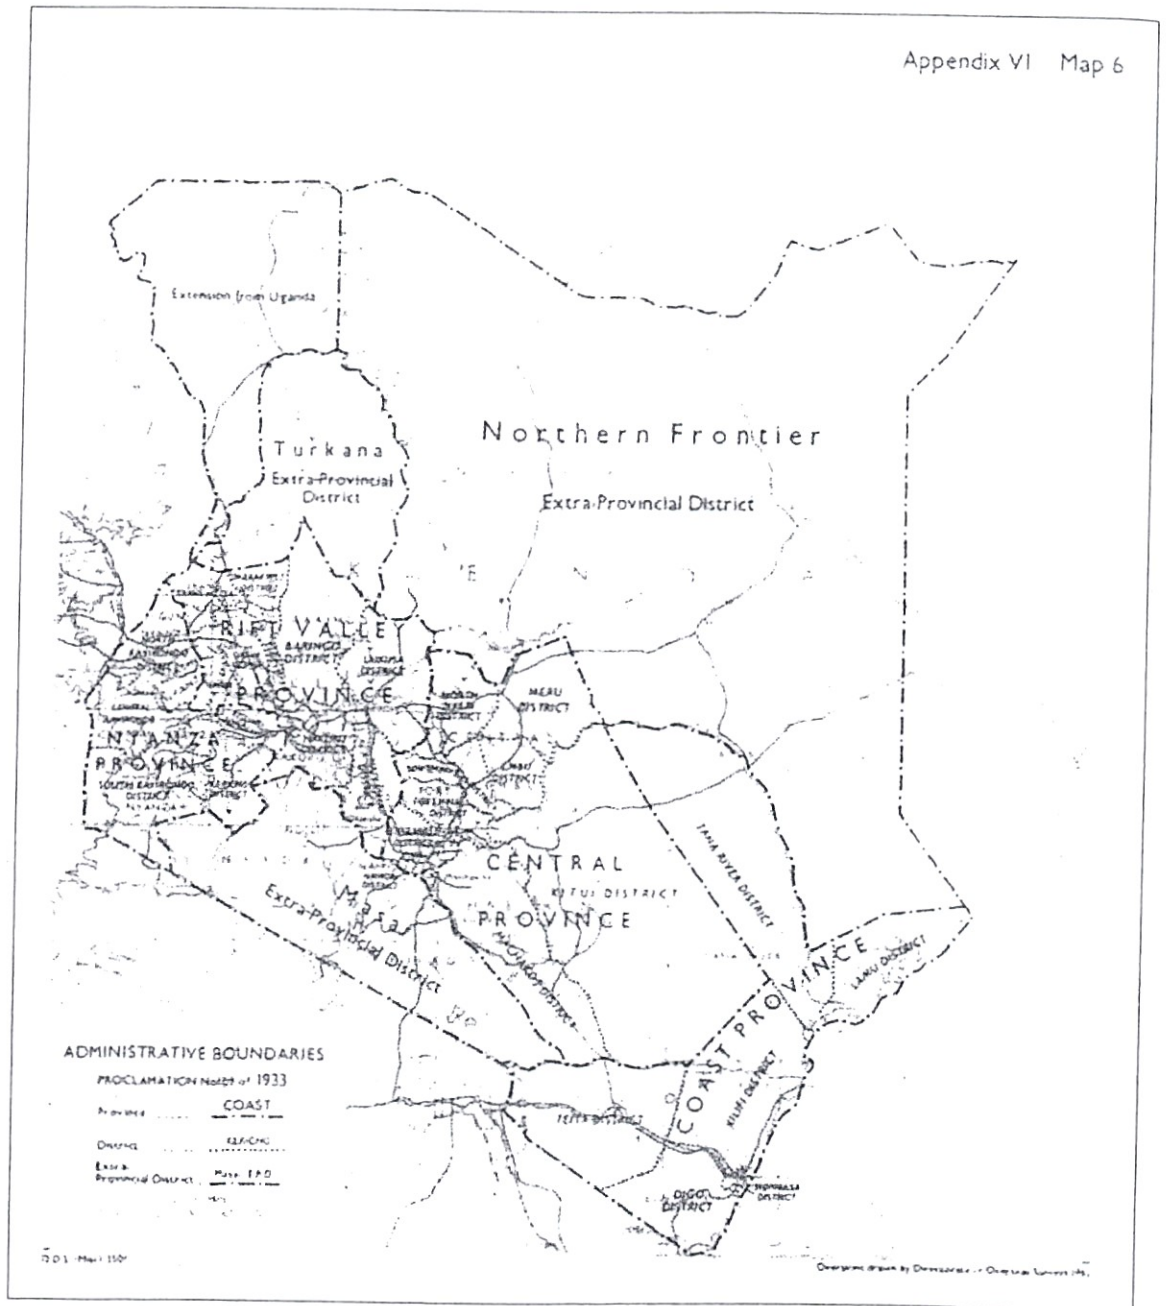

Map 5: Administrative boundaries as at 1929

Appendix VI Map 5

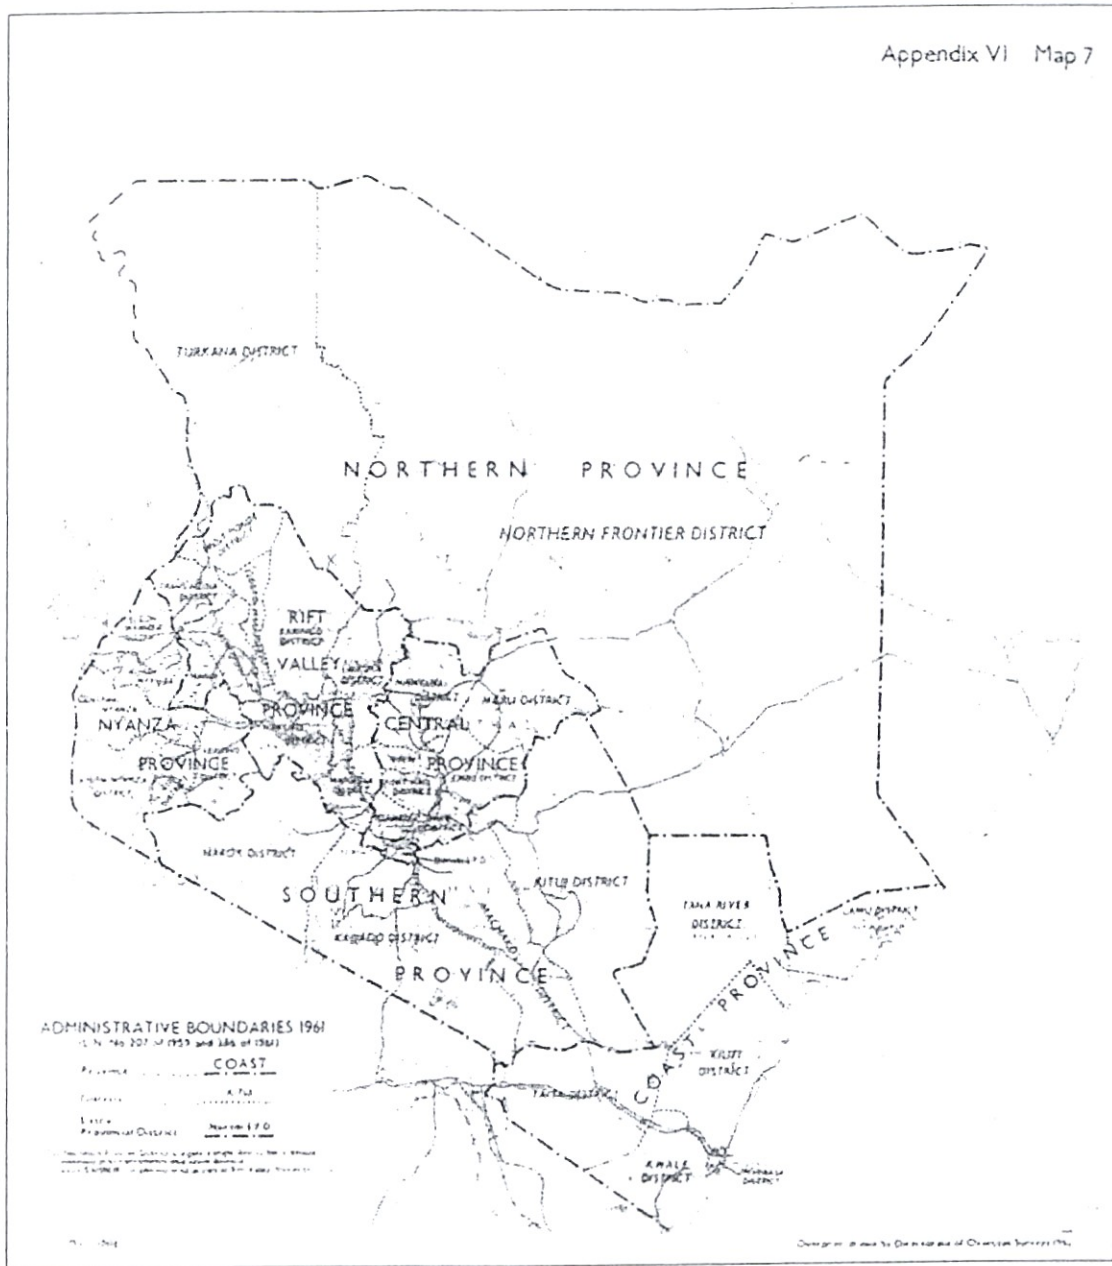

102. By 1929, still other divisions had been made and the extra provincial districts had been abandoned. Turkana had been added and Kerio divided into Nzoia, Rift Valley and Naivasha Provinces. (See map 6 below).

Map 6: Administrative boundaries as at 1933

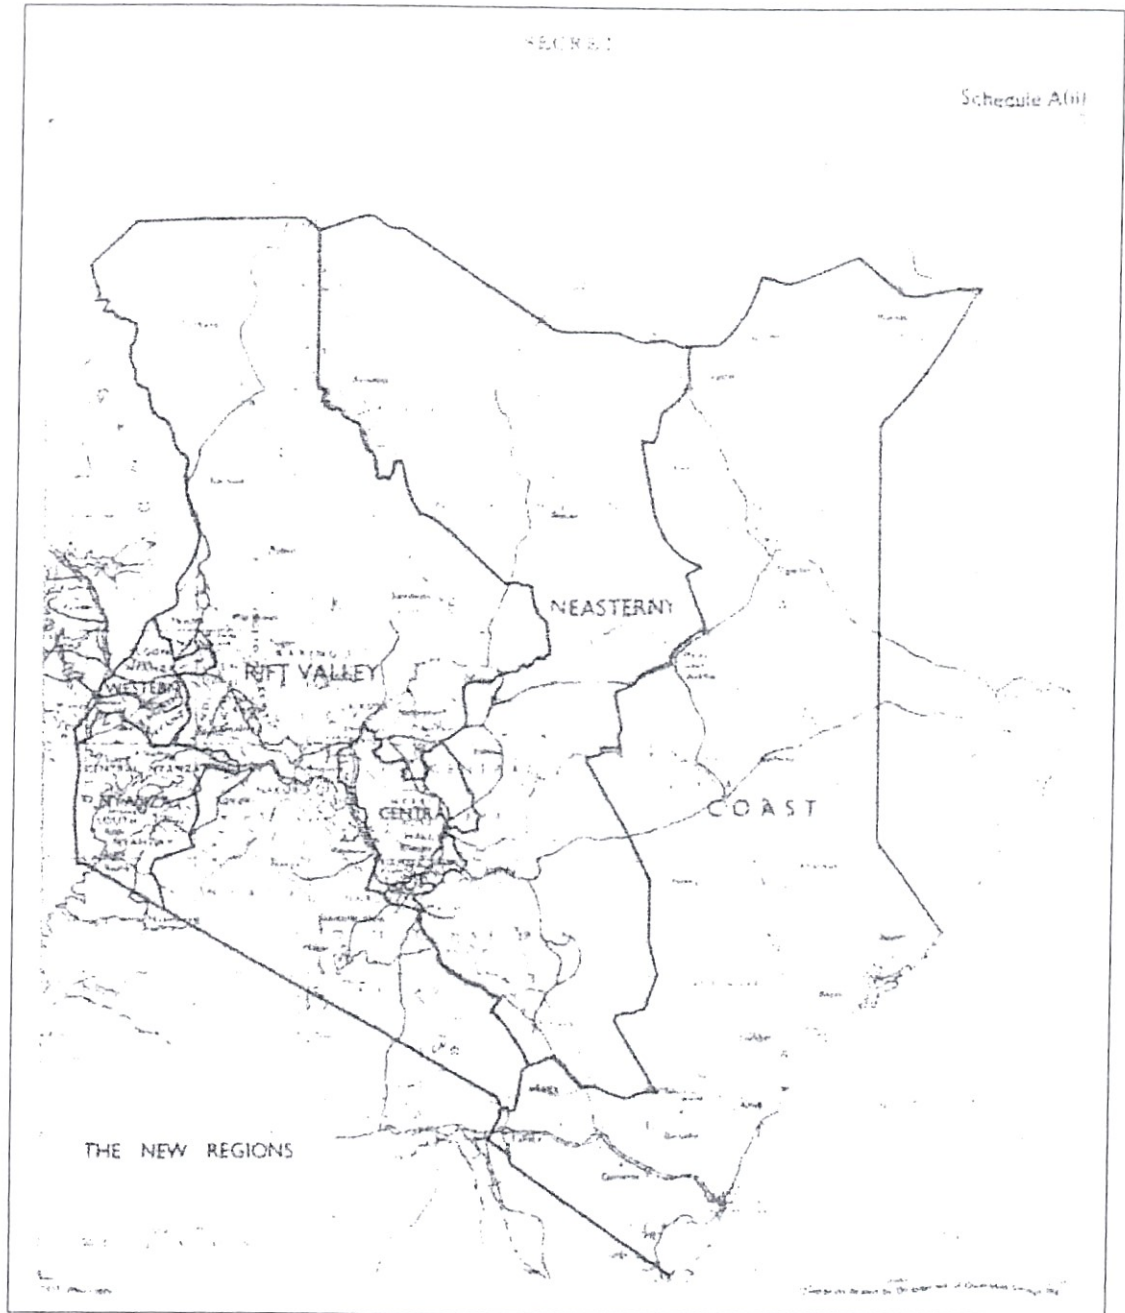

103. By 1933, Turkana, Northern Frontier and Masai had become extra-provincial Districts, and Nzoia and Naivasha Provinces had been absorbed into larger Rift Valley Province and Ukamba combined with Kikuyu to form the Central Province. Finally Turkana was combined with the Northern Frontier to comprise the Northern Province. (See map 7 below).

Map 7: Administrative boundaries as at 1961

104. The 1962 Regional Boundaries Commission was mandated to divide Kenya into six (6) regions and the Nairobi area, relating them to existing boundaries but not treating these as a determining factor, and ensuring that people who wished to be associated in one region, were allowed to do so. (See Map 8 below).

Map 8: Administrative boundaries (new regions) of 1962

105. With the attainment of independence in 1963, Kenya adopted a national Constitution which created two houses of Parliament – the House of Representatives and the Senate. The House of Representatives had 117 elected members each representing a parliamentary constituency; and the senate consisted of 41 elected members to represent the 40 administrative Districts plus Nairobi area.

106. The independence Constitution of Kenya provided for seven regions and Nairobi area. That Constitution provided that, any two regions that had a common boundary would by agreement in writing between the presidents of the respective regional assemblies alter their boundary. The alteration of the boundary required the approval by the respective regional assemblies, by way of a legislation passed for that purpose⁴⁴. The constitution had elaborate provisions on the consequences of altering a regional boundary on District boundaries, House of Representatives, and Regional Assemblies.⁴⁵ The constitution.
107. The independence constitution of Kenya divided the country into 40 Districts and Nairobi area⁴⁶. It also provided for the seven regions and Nairobi area⁴⁷. That constitution provided for the boundaries of the Districts and the Districts were clustered to form each of the seven regions. It also provided for the boundaries of Nairobi area⁴⁸. The list of the independence Districts and Nairobi area is attached as Annex 9.
108. Following constitutional amendments, it was provided that the boundaries of Nairobi area and the Districts shall continue to be in force as part of the constitution and would only be changed by or under an Act of Parliament⁴⁹. Thus, the former constitution of Kenya, which was replaced on 27th August 2010, provided that "District" means one of the Districts into which Kenya is divided in the manner prescribed by an Act of Parliament⁵⁰.
109. It is therefore notable that in line with the constitutional provisions, the Districts and Provinces Act No. 5 of 1992 is the only Act currently in force and providing for the names and boundaries of the Districts and Provinces into which Kenya is divided into. The Act provides for forty-six Districts plus Nairobi area, as well as the seven Provinces of Kenya plus Nairobi area. The list of these Districts and Provinces is attached as Annex 10.
110. Under the new Constitution of Kenya, the territory of Kenya is divided into forty-seven Counties⁵¹. Further, it is provided that within five years after the effective date, the national government shall re-structure the system of administration, commonly known as the Provincial Administration to accord with and respect the system of devolved government established under the new constitutional dispensation⁵².

111. It is against this historical background that the IIBRC made recommendations on boundaries for Districts and other units.

2.1.2 Electoral Boundaries - Constituencies

112. The creation of electoral units in Kenya started with the creation of 117 Constituencies in 1963, followed by Constituency reviews in 1966 and 1986, and culminating in the creation of 210 Constituencies in 1996.
113. A Royal Commission was appointed in 1962 to carry out an inquiry into creating 100 constituencies for the newly created nation of Kenya. The Commission toured Kenya and at various venues discussed the matter with all categories of leaders of the time, including influential tribal leaders and chiefs.
114. The Royal Commission's mandate was to "divide Kenya into not substantially more or fewer than 100 parliamentary constituencies and no constituency is to form part of more than one Region" with the following considerations:
 - (a) each Constituency shall return one member only to the lower house;
 - (b) communications;
 - (c) community of interest;
 - (d) the boundaries of existing administrative areas; and
 - (e) the need to ensure adequate representation of urban and sparsely populated rural areas.
104. Delimitation involved the use of county council wards or locations and sub-locations where they existed, in order to delimit constituencies, particularly in the more densely populated areas. In more sparsely populated areas, or where sub-divisions did not exist, delimitation was largely based on administrative Districts. In rural areas with high population density and good communication, constituencies were delimited with populations above the mean figure. In certain cases, strong tribal affinities or a case of close community of interest induced the commission to delimit constituencies well below the mean figure. The exercise took about five months from 9th August 1962 to January, 1963.
105. The independence Constitution of Kenya provided that, for purposes of elections of members of the House of Representatives. Kenya would be divided into Constituencies not being more than 130 or less than 110. Having such boundaries as may be prescribed by order made by the Electoral Commission⁵³. The constitution provided that no Constituency shall form part of more than one region or of both the Nairobi area and a region. The other key parameters to guide the delimitation process were that, all constituencies were to contain as nearly equal numbers of inhabitants as it appeared to the Commission, to be reasonably practicable, but the Commission had the discretion to depart from this principle taking into account.

- (a) density of population and in particular, the need to ensure adequate representation of urban and sparsely-populated rural areas;
- (b) the means of communication;
- (c) geographical features;
- (d) community of interest; and
- (e) the boundaries of existing administrative areas⁵⁴.

The review of the number and boundaries of the constituencies was to be undertaken at intervals of less than eight nor more than ten years provided that, whenever a census of the population would be held, the Commission had the discretion to review the boundaries as it considered desirable in light of the census. For the purposes of determining the number of inhabitants of any part of Kenya, the Commission was to ascertain the number by reference to the latest census of the population held in accordance with the applicable law. These parameters for delimitation of constituencies generally remained in place, till the Constitutional Amendment of 29th December, 2008, under which the parameters that guided the work of IIBRC were enacted. However it is notable that under the former Constitution of Kenya, the number of constituencies had been fixed at a minimum of one hundred and eighty eight (188) and a maximum of two hundred and ten (210)⁵⁵. See map 9⁵⁶ below and Annex 11 showing 117 constituencies created in 1963.

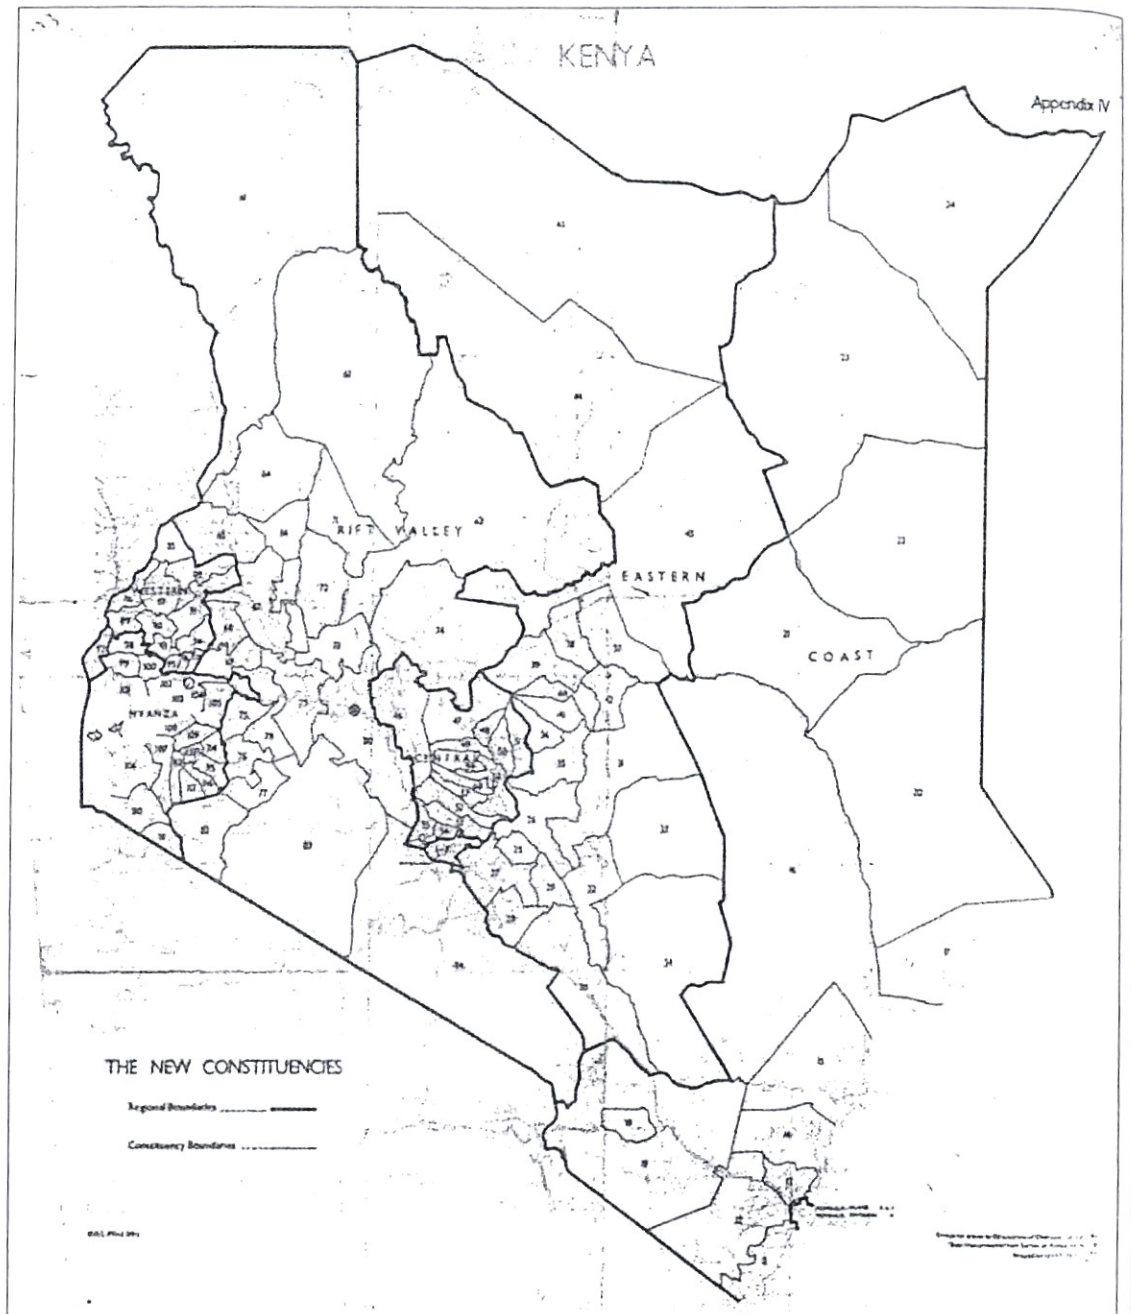

⁵³ Section 40 (1) of the Constitution of Kenya, 1963

⁵⁴ See provisions of Section 40 of the Constitution of Kenya, 1963. These parameters guided all the boundary reviews by the ECK as were provided for in Section 42 of the Constitution replaced on 27th August, 2010

Map 9: 117 constituencies at independence

Between 1964 and 1966, there were constitutional amendments, whose consequence was that, the seven regions of Kenya and the Senate were abolished. Thus by 1966 the House of Representatives that had been renamed The National Assembly had 158 parliamentary Constituencies consisting of the original 117 plus 41 newly created Constituencies with the abolition of the Senate. That number was decided by Parliament alone in accordance with its mandate⁵⁷. At that time, Parliament granted to the Electoral Commission (ECK) the power to determine the boundaries of these Constituencies. See map 10 below and Annex 11 showing 158 constituencies created in 1966.

113. As for the local authorities and their electoral areas, the Constitution of Kenya, 2010 provides that all local authorities established under the Local Government Act (Cap. 265) existing immediately before 27th August 2010, shall continue to exist subject to any law that might be enacted⁶⁸.

3.0 Chapter Three – Consultations with Stakeholders and the Public

114. Public Hearings were held throughout the country as per IIBRC's mandate between 1st February and 14th May, 2010. The hearings were characterized by oral and written submissions and after 14th May 2010, the IIBRC continued receiving memorandum and to hold hearings with interested parties.
115. The objective was to collect views and consult all stakeholders regarding electoral and administrative boundaries. Presentations were made orally or by written memoranda by individuals and groups.
116. The commission invited the public to come and give presentation in scheduled public hearings as well as submit memorandum through the postal service, couriers, fax, delivery to physical location and email. The schedule of the Programme of the Public Hearings and other Consultations is attached here as Annex 4.
117. Overall one hundred and seventy (170) out of two hundred and ten (210) MPs attended the public hearings including the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister Raila A. Odinga and the two Deputy Prime Ministers Hon. Uhuru Kenyatta and Hon. Wycliffe Musalia Mudavadi, many Councillors and opinion leaders from all spheres of our society attended the hearings. The leaders and senior public officials all came not only to give their views but also to listen to citizen's views on boundaries.
118. Eight (8) Provincial visits were held during which thousands of People attended the provincial visits. One hundred and six (106) Public Hearings were held, with a total of 20,726 attending the Public hearings, during which 2,646 persons gave oral submissions to the commission, the list of the names of these persons is attached as Annex 14.
119. Many memoranda were presented to the IIBRC, in some cases signed by thousands of persons. Additionally many minority groups were heard and their views equally taken into consideration. The list of some of the memoranda is attached as Annex 15.
120. During consultation, it clearly emerged that Kenyans were aware of the historical injustices in delimitation of the electoral and administrative boundaries in Kenya. The majority felt that constituencies were not adequate given the population increase and marginalization of minorities. The issues of lack of infrastructure and poverty disparities were also cited. Majority favoured and desired the use of local names in their constituencies, districts or wards. In some other areas there was no agreement on the boundaries for constituencies and wards as well as administrative units and the IIBRC had to make decisions to reconcile the differences amicably as far as it was possible.

3.1 Synopsis of the Public Hearings and Submissions

121. Many of the submissions received were detailed in their suggestions of where boundaries for constituencies, local authority electoral units, districts and other units should lie. Many of these suggestions referred to the constitutional parameters. Many residents suggested redrawing of boundaries on the basis of community of interest, geographical features, population trends and means of communication. The submissions varied from proposing the creation or splitting of constituencies because of high population, expansiveness of the land, ease of communication and community of interest.
122. Some of the presentations also took a broad view of an area, so that there would be similar presentations from three or four constituencies that were similar. Those where there were representations for splitting were not necessarily unanimous. In some instances, there were suggestions to redraw boundaries so that if a third constituency was suggested, it emerged from more than one constituency and in some instances, the only change desired was in the name.
123. From the public hearings a majority of the residents wanted their constituencies split with a few exceptions such as Taveta, Garsen, Nyeri Town, Mathioya, Kigumo, Likoni, Aldai, Samburu East, Mogotio, Eldama Ravine, Budalangi, Sabatia, Bonchari, Nyaribari Masaba, West Mugirango, Nyaribari Chache, Rongai and Chepalungu constituencies.
124. A majority of the citizens wanted more wards drawn along the boundaries of administrative locations.
125. A majority of the communities wanted more sub-locations and locations while a few wanted additional divisions and districts. There was a general view that every constituency should constitute an administrative district. As for the provinces, there was an insignificant number of submissions for additional provinces, thus there was a general satisfaction with the provincial boundaries.
126. It is notable that the people unanimously wanted the historical administrative boundary disputes especially at District levels, to be resolved amicably by an independent commission (some citizens thought that it was the work of the IIBRC to resolve these disputes).

- 127 Minority groups expected the IIBRC to protect their voting and representation rights by ensuring that there is no dilution of their collective representation power.

3.2 Cases of Boundary Concerns

128. During the public hearings and submissions, various boundary concerns were brought to the attention of the IIBRC. These were attributable to historical, political, economic and cultural conflicts existing in the various parts of the country

3.2.1 Identified Boundary Concerns

130. The IIBRC received many cases of boundary concerns and for which the people wanted a mechanism for their management and resolution in promotion of harmonious co-existence between communities and promotion of national cohesion. A comprehensive list of some of these cases is attached in Annex 16.

3.2.2 Root Causes

- 131 Some of the root causes of the cases of boundary concerns that were identified by the IIBRC during the discharge of its mandate include.

- (a) history of unfair fixing, review and alteration of electoral and administrative boundaries;
- (b) insecurity including cattle rustling and organized violent groups;
- (c) historical injustices especially the abuse of human rights, water resources, land issues, and other natural resources;
- (d) absence of institutionalized mechanism for conflict management and resolution that recognize traditional methods and structures that maybe useful;
- (e) past and present inequality and inequities in resource allocation; and
- (f) the challenge of turning multiplicity of cultures, races, ethnicity, and other diversities into the common good of Kenya.

4.0 Chapter Four - Data Analysis

4.1 Analysis of the Population Census Data

133. The IIBRC calculated the population quota using the formula given in the constitution, being:⁶⁹

National Population as at 2009 census
290 Constituencies

134. On the basis of the Kenya National Population and Housing Census results as released by the Ministry of Planning, National Development and Vision 2030, the national population was 38,610,097, the constitutionally prescribed constituencies being 290, the IIBRC used the population quota of 133,138. Table 1 below shows how the populations of the 210 constituencies compared to the national population quota.

136. Applying the Constitutional deviations provided for in the Constitution for "cities", the IIBRC computed the deviations for city constituencies.
137. Applying the Constitutional deviations provided for in the constitution for sparsely populated areas and the guideline that sparsely populated areas are the constituencies whose population density is equal or less than the national population density calculated using the 2009 Population and Housing Census result and which is 66 persons per square kilometre, the IIBRC computed the deviations for constituencies in these areas.
138. Applying the Constitutional deviations provided for in the Constitution for "Other Areas" and the IIBRC guideline that the constituencies falling within "Other Areas" to be those constituencies whose population densities are greater than the National Population Density of 66 Persons per square kilometre and which do not fall within the City of Nairobi, the IIBRC computed the deviations for constituencies in other areas
139. On the basis of up-to-date data on the parameters in Article 89(5) (a) (b) and (c) of the Constitution which the IIBRC analyzed with the assistance of the Geographical Information Systems (GIS) and other means available, the IIBRC classified the constituencies in the "Other Areas" class for their consideration for subdivision on the basis of tending towards sparsely populated areas or cities. The IIBRC computed the deviations for these constituencies in other areas.
140. In consideration of the parameters in Article 89(5) (a) (b) and (c), the IIBRC considered and created new constituencies from one, two or more constituencies provided that:
 - (a) the constituencies fell within the same County;
 - (b) the constituencies fell within the same class of cities or sparsely populated or other areas;
 - (c) the constituencies were neighbouring; and
 - (d) the resultant constituency's population met the criteria as per Article 89(6) of the Constitution.
141. Using a methodical, logical and scientific computation that combines all computations set out above, The IIBRC determined boundaries of the 290 constituencies and in view of the computation set out above took into account:
 - (a) geographical features and urban centers;
 - (b) community of interest, historical, economic and cultural ties; and
 - (c) means of communication

The IIBRC then assigned names to constituencies as per the submissions.

142. This led to the final delimitations.

143. The IIBRC determined Kenya's constituencies to be 290 as set out in the Constitution.⁷⁰

4.2 Analysis of Other Parameters

144. In consideration of the Constitutional parameters provided for in the Constitution, the IIBRC also looked at geographical features and urban centres; community of interest, historical, cultural and economic ties; and means of communication.

4.3.1 Geographical Features and Urban Centres

145. Geographical Information Systems (GIS) was used in visualizing spatially geographical features and urban centres for patterns of human settlements. Inputs in the GIS included land use / land cover, relief (digital elevation models), and communications data (fibre optic, TV masts, postal services, mobile telephony). These were the parameters to take into account in determination of new constituencies and county wards.

4.3.2 Community of Interest, Historical, Cultural and Economic Ties

146. This was analyzed using the public hearings and submissions, cultural groupings as given in the census and the economic infrastructure such as schools, hospitals and clinics, agro processing factories, plants, installation, bore holes, abattoirs, rivers, market centres and other areas that are of economic interest to the country. Analysis of Data and Information of the Public Hearings and Submissions public hearings and submissions were analyzed using analysis matrix appendixes herein for the 210 Constituencies.

4.3.3 Means of Communication

147. Means of communication considered roads, telecommunication (radio and mobile telephony), print, internet connectivity, and postal and courier services. Each constituency and ward was analyzed and classified based on its access to these services and infrastructure.

⁷⁰ Article 89 (1) of the Constitution of Kenya, 2010.

5.0 Chapter Five – Delimitation of Boundaries and Recommendations

148 This section discusses determination of constituencies, IIBRC's views on wards, and recommendations on administrative boundaries.

5.1 Electoral Areas

149 Electoral areas refer to units for electing single member representation in the National Assembly and county assemblies. In Kenya, the electoral areas for representation in the National Assembly are known as constituencies while those for county assemblies are called wards as provided for in the Constitution

5.1.1 Constituencies

150. In accordance with Section 27(1) (b) of the Sixth Schedule of the Constitution the Commission determined the names and details of the boundaries of the 290 constituencies and published the relevant order in the Gazette which appears as Annex 17. Annex 18 is a list of described constituencies, their corresponding populations, and areas. Annex 19 is a compilation of maps for every region (county).

5.1.2 County wards

151. Under section 27(1)(b) of the Sixth Schedule, the IIBRC was mandated to determine optimal numbers, names and boundary details of wards, a ward being a constituency for election of a single member for representation in the county assembly. The IIBRC was not able to deliver on this mandate owing to time limits as the new Constitution came into force on 27 August 2010. The IIBRC therefore recommends that the existing local authority electoral areas may serve as such wards until the County Assembly Wards are determined in accordance with the Constitution.

5.1.3 Recommendations on Local Authority Electoral Units

152. The IIBRC under the former Constitution was to make recommendations to Parliament on the delimitation of boundaries for local authority electoral units including the optimal numbers and names. Following the promulgation of the new Constitution of Kenya, Section 18 of the Sixth Schedule provides that all local authorities established under the Local Government Act (CAP. 265) existing immediately before the effective date shall continue to exist subject to any law that might be enacted. In the circumstances, it is the recommendation of the IIBRC that, pending the passing of the legislation as contemplated under the Constitution, the local authority electoral units specified in the Order published under the Gazette Supplement No. 70 of 29th September, 2006 as amended to the current date (November, 2010) shall remain in effect

5.2 Recommendations on Administrative Boundaries

153. The IIBRC under the former Constitution was to make recommendations to Parliament on the administrative boundaries including the fixing, reviewing and variations of boundaries of districts and other units. Following the promulgation of the new Constitution on 27th August, 2010, the Constitution provides that within five years, the national government shall restructure the system of administration commonly known as the provincial administration to accord with and respect the system of devolved government established under the new constitutional dispensation. Towards that goal and in discharge of its mandate to make recommendations on the administrative boundaries including the fixing, reviewing and variations of boundaries of districts and other units, the IIBRC recommends to Parliament as follows:

- (a) The Parliament on priority basis should pass legislation to establish a Commission to be known as the Administrative Boundaries Commission (ABC).
- (b) The members of the ABC shall be persons of high integrity with a distinguished record of service and shall be at least three and not more than nine members including the Chairperson who shall be a person qualified to be appointed as a judge of the High Court. The members shall serve for only one term of six years with security of tenure. The Commission shall be funded out of monies allocated for that purpose by Parliament.
- (c) The functions of the ABC shall include:
 - i. periodic review and determination of the boundaries, names and head quarters of administrative units Kenya shall be divided into;
 - ii. advising both the national Government and county governments on the different levels and functions of administrative units Kenya shall be divided into including creation of new units and abolition of existing ones;
 - iii. hearing and determining administrative boundary disputes and in which case any person dissatisfied with the decision of the ABC may appeal to the Supreme Court;
 - iv. promoting harmonious co-existence of the various communities of Kenya including use of traditional structures of boundary dispute resolution and management;
 - v. to advise the President and the Parliament on harmonious inter-play between administrative and electoral boundaries;
 - vi. maintaining up to date information on the details of administrative boundaries in Kenya; and
 - vii. to perform such other functions that may be vested upon it by Parliament.
- (d) The ABC in undertaking the review and determination of the boundaries, names and head quarters of administrative units shall take into account factors including:
 - i. the need for efficient, effective and accountable government service delivery;

- ii. promotion of harmonious discharge of the functions of both national government and county governments;
 - iii. fair and sustainable use of natural resources;
 - iv. population density and demographic trends;
 - v. historical, cultural and economic ties;
 - vi. the views of the communities affected;
 - vii. geographical features; and
 - viii. establishment of sustainable and equitable administrative units in terms of levels, sizes and resource allocation or utilization.
- (e) The ABC shall prioritize the handling of the cases of boundary concerns as identified and set out in this report so that they are finalized as soon as possible and preferably before the first general elections under the new Constitution dispensation.
- (f) The ABC should be vested with adequate powers and safe guards to facilitate efficient and effective performance of its functions. The powers and safe guards should include:
- i. the power to appoint, discipline and remove its staff;
 - ii. the power to sermon any person to attend and provide evidence during its proceedings,
 - iii. the power to undertake alternative dispute resolution proceedings such as arbitration, conciliation, mediation and negotiation;
 - iv. the duty of government departments and public officials to co-operate with it as may be necessary;
 - v. the power to determine its procedures and to amplify by way of definitions the parameters applicable in delivery of its mandate, and
 - vi. immunity of the members and staff from personal liability for bonafides actions during performance of duty.

154. The IIBRC recommends that until the ABC is established as recommended, the existing lawful administrative units namely the provinces, districts, divisions, locations and sub-locations as at 27th August, 2010 should remain in place as per the then prevailing boundaries, names and head quarters as the case may have been at that date

5.3 Areas of Further Work on Boundaries

155. Due to the changed mandate and timeframe of the IIBRC, the initial work plan prepared to run up to June 2011 had to be revised in order to comply with the requirements of the Constitution which stipulated that the term of IIBRC should end by November 27th 2010. Hence areas of further work on boundaries include:

- (a) Need for field surveys to confirm the maps for the 290 constituencies in line with the names and boundary details as determined by the IIBRC.

- (b) Full operationalization of the GIS lab in order for sustainable maintenance of up-to-date maps for constituencies and wards.
- (c) Determination of the optimal numbers, names and boundaries of County Wards in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution.
- (d) Sustainable mechanisms for resolution and management of boundary disputes with priority to handling the cases of concern as reported herein.

Appendix 7: Determination of Constituencies by the IIBRC

BACKGROUND

1. Kenya is divided into 290 Constituencies as stipulated in Article 89(1) of the Constitution
2. National population as enumerated in 2009 Census = 38,610,097
3. Population quota as stipulated in Article 89 (12) of the Constitution = $(38,610,097 / 290) = 133,138$.
4. According to Article 89(6), the deviation from the quota can be:
 - i. 40% greater than population quota for cities;
 - ii. 40% less than population quota for sparsely populated areas;
 - iii. 30% less than population quota for other areas; and
 - iv. 30% greater than population quota for other areas.This recognizes only 3 classes, i.e. city, sparsely populated areas and other areas.

DELIMITATION

Modeling

Initial modeling by the IIBRC involved the exploration of several methods. These included 4-class classification, Direct Divisions, Quota Rule, Method of Equal Proportions, and a 'Cede-part' method.

Classification was an exploration of a 4-class approach, classifying the country into city, other areas (near urban), other areas (near sparse) and sparsely populated areas.

The Direct Divisions or Fractions method involved the application of the population quota to all constituencies. This gave 320 new constituencies which were reduced to 290 in 5 steps including the application of maximum deviation for city (Nairobi) and rounding off of decimal points.

The Quota Rule approach was domesticated thus:

$$[\text{Constituency population} / \text{total population}] \times 290 \text{ Constituencies}$$

The Method of Equal Proportions was used to give a ranking of constituencies on how each deserved the available seats from 211 to 290 based on their population. Initially all 210 constituencies are allocated a seat, and the application of multipliers denoted which constituency deserved the next seat.

The 'Cede-Part' method was a follow-up to the direct divisions' method. Based on a large extent on qualitative analysis of constituency populations, geography and consultations with stakeholders, it was meant to guide delimitation of constituencies in circumstances where:

- (a) There would be need to create a new constituency out of two or more constituencies;
- (b) The need to progress existing constituency populations and size towards the national population quota e.g. Mvita; and
- (c) Where the existing constituency exceeds the maximum population deviations by small margins, but if subdivided, would go below the minimum population quota e.g. Kieni, Kiharu, Emuhaya, etc.

Adopted Delimitation method

1. Nairobi being the only legal city, the population of Nairobi subjected to its population quota follows:

$$((40\% \times 133,138) + 133,138) = 186,393$$

2. Subjecting the population of Nairobi to the population quota for cities then:

$$= (3,138,369 / 186,393) = 17 \text{ Constituencies}$$

3. Subtracting the population of Nairobi from the national population

$$= (38,610,097 - 3,138,369) = 35,471,728$$

4. Subtracting the 17 constituencies given to Nairobi from the 290 Constituencies:

$$= (290-17) = 273$$

5. Dividing the remaining population by the remaining Constituencies:

$$= (35,471,728 / 273) = 129,933$$

6. Subjecting the remaining provinces to this quota:

$$= \text{Province population (X) / 129,933}$$

7. This gives a total of 291 Constituencies. The Rift Valley is then reduced by 1 because of its large number of Constituencies.

8. To give the delimitations summarised in table below:

Table of delimitations
