Background

"Land crimes" are as much a part of Kenya's past wrongdoings, as economic crimes and human rights crimes. Together, they constitute the country's transitional justice agenda. The challenge to the government is to rise to the occasion and deal comprehensively with the corrupt and fraudulent practices, which have bedeviled Kenya's public land allocation and administration for several decades. It will take a herculean effort to rectify all that has gone wrong. Therefore, government must involve the people, as what is at stake is the national interest. This ought to be the concern of every citizen. Effort and support should be broadened and the positive role that civil society and the media could play should be recognized and encouraged.

Framework

The appendix forms an analysis of the implementation of the outcome of the inquiry. It integrates the retrospective (findings) and prospective (recommendations) parts of the report. The former dealt with the questions "what happened with public land, how, and why? and what have been the impacts?". The latter appraised the question "what should be done?" The integration of the parts leads to the question "how to do it?"

An "implementation framework" is employed to conceptualize and analyze the strategy implied by the inquiry and the organization, that is, the parts of the government system that would implement it. The strategy component is split into the implied policy and the programme. Policy comprises purpose and objectives and programme includes the elements of outcomes, actions, resources and plan. The organisation component, that is, the government system reveals the set of implementers of the strategy. The set consists of the existing structures of government, and the new structures that would be required, to execute, oversee and steer the strategy. The pictorial display of the overview of the framework follows.

Strategy

Policy: kind, purpose and objectives

The kind of policy implied by the inquiry can be described as a "redress policy" to ameliorate the grave situation and the severity of crisis, resulting from the illegal allocation of public land, particularly public utility land. It falls into the realm of "transitional justice". The implementation of the implied policy must take into account its complex, unique and historical nature and character.

The purpose and objectives of the policy are both, retrospective or backward-looking, as they correct past wrongdoings, and also prospective or forward-looking, as they prevent future repetition and recurrence, while nurturing hope of amelioration. The purpose or the strategic intent, could be formulated as "the redress of the past wrongdoings by government, individuals and bodies corporate, both public and private, with respect to the illegal allocation and development of public land." The recommendations of the inquiry imply the set policy objectives in such areas as: legislation enactment, revocation and rectification, lustration, prosecution, prevention, monitoring and divestment.

The objective of legislation enactment is to provide a forum to enable the revocation and rectification process to become practicable and to modify any existing obstructive laws. This can be achieved by: (a) the enactment of an amendment to the Government Lands Act (GLA) by the insertion of a new section 147 (A), to establish and operate the Land Titles Tribunal, and (b) to enact consequential amendments, and essential but not consequential amendments to other legislation.

The objective of revocation and rectification is to: (a) revoke or to rectify registered titles to land, as necessary, in conformity with the law, (b) examine and verify the validity of registered titles to land, and (c) obtain restitution of land and property held under revoked titles, and (d) obtain restitution from those unjustly enriched under the equitable doctrine of restitution by the return of property or its monetary value.

The objective of lustration is to: (a) purify the public service by removal from employment of officials for gross abuse of office and complicity in the illegal allocation of land, (b) name, shame and bar the perpetrators and conspirators from holding public office, and (c) invoke disciplinary action against errant professionals (lustration derived from Latin, lustrare, "to shed light").

The objective of prosecution is to: (a) investigate with a view to the prosecution of criminal offenders and offences suspected or disclosed in the illegal allocation of land, (b) prosecute public officers and their accomplices and conspirators in Special Courts provided for under the Anti-Corruption and Economic Crimes Act, (c) prosecute offenders under the Penal Code and the Criminal Procedure Act, and (d) obtain restitution of land and property under the Criminal Procedure Act.

The objective of prevention is to: (a) diminish opportunity for corruption, fraudulent practices and deviational acts, (b) use deterrence to bring about correctness and compliance with legal and administrative procedures, (c) encourage insurance industry to investigate establishment of land titles insurance in Kenya, and (d) counteract environmental degradation by restitution of excised forest lands, wetlands, riparian lands, the foreshores and so on, whether encroached or held under illegal titles.

The objective of monitoring is to: (a) create a register of public lands of the Republic of Kenya, which comprise—urban lands (cities, municipalities, townships), lands of ministries and departments, state corporations lands, trust lands, settlement schemes lands, forest lands, wetlands, riparian lands, the foreshores, game reserves and national parks lands, and national museums and protected areas lands, (b) audit all illegal allocations of public land, and refer the cases to the Tribunal for consideration and determination, (c) digitalize all registered titles to land, and (d) audit State corporations, that is, the conduct of the heads and directors, regarding gross deviations from the core mandate, including diversion of public resources for illegal and irregular deals in land and property or personal gain, and any criminal offences committed in the process.

The objective of divestment is to: (a) restitute as a corrective measure, land intended to settle the landless, but diverted to ineligible persons, as it is the case in settlement schemes, and (b) allocate such lands to eligible persons in compliance with the initial distribution policy.

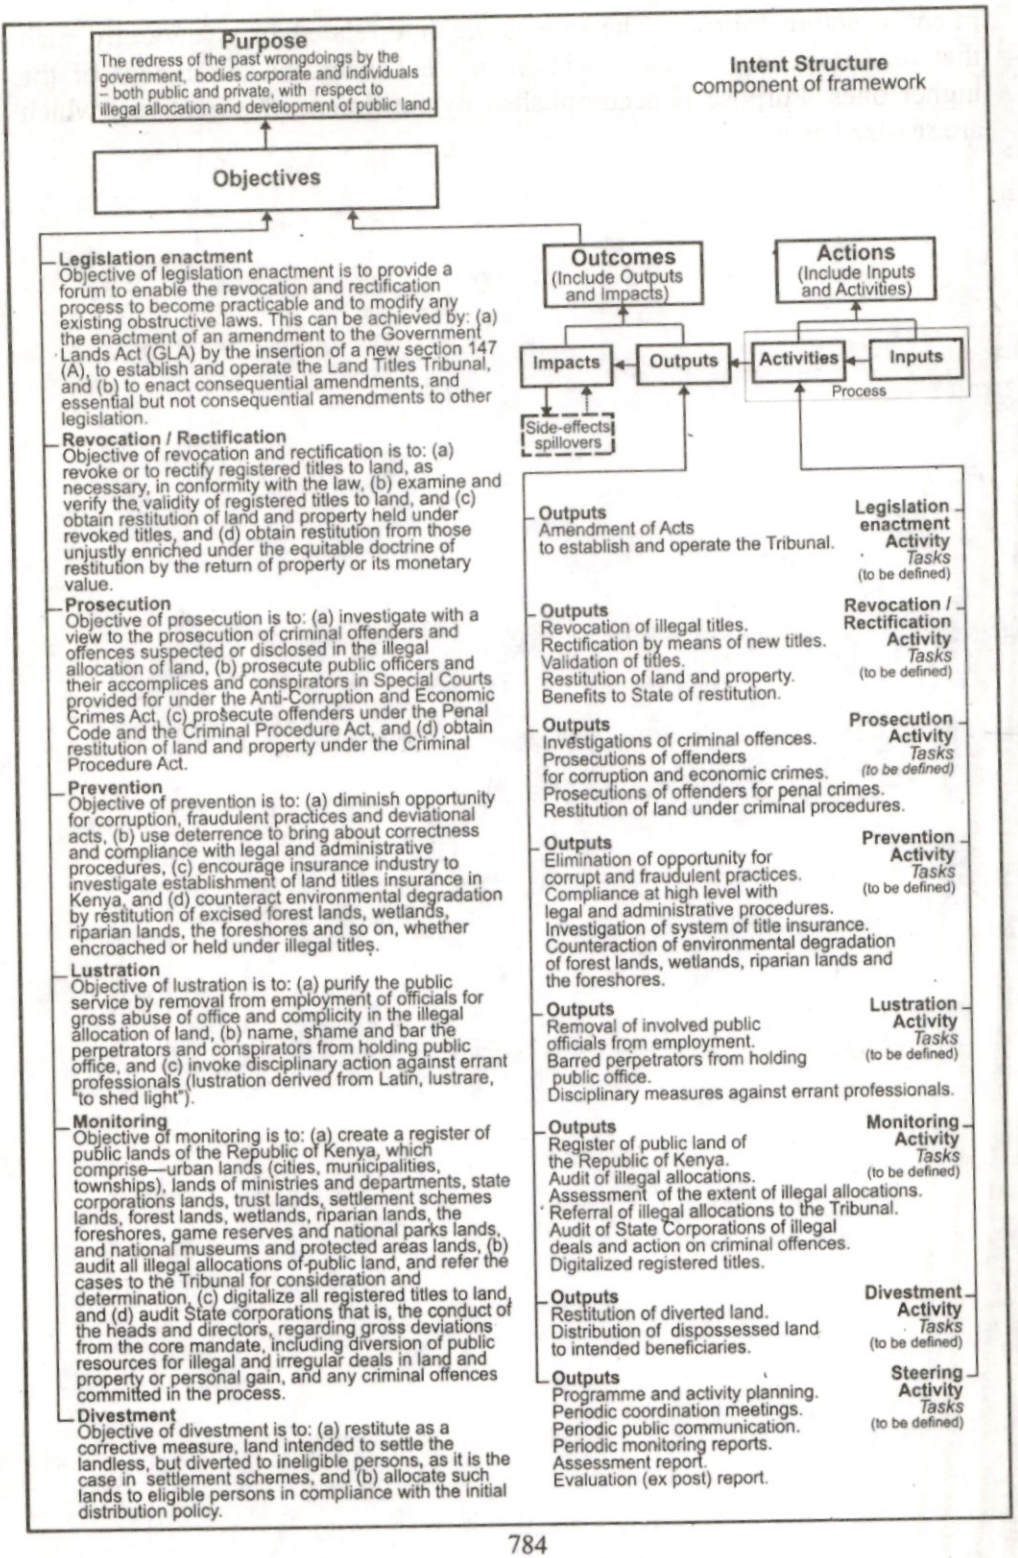

Constraints
The types of limitations and obstacles, including the risks that may stand in the way of redress of the past wrongdoings and achieving the objectives are political, legal, organisational, and budgetary. Political, as the individuals, public officials, even elected representatives or bodies, whose stakes—the ill-gotten land and property, would be threatened by the strategy, may erect barriers everywhere and impose limitations on the acceptance and execution of the strategy. Legal, in terms of the laws and rules, the due process and litigations that may limit attempts to achieve objectives. The likely risk would be that the strategy is subverted by its opponents through overt and covert politics.

Organisational, as the structures that would implement the policy and programme may limit efforts to achieve the objectives due to their past involvement in corrupt and fraudulent practices, or inherited incompetence and dysfunctional systems. The possible risk would be that the strategy is inhibited rather than enabled to succeed. Budgetary, as the government funds being limited may require that the effort to achieve the objectives of the strategy be considered in light of the scarcity of resources. It is important to take into account the budgetary implications of the uncertainty concerning the turnaround time or the life cycle of the strategy. The risk would be that a poor fit of resources/budget and the strategy might weaken its effect.

Programme

Intent Structure
The intent structure is a tool that works with a set of elements encountered in programming such as: purpose, objectives, outcomes, activities, resources, allocations, decisions, or intentions. The pictorial display of the intent structure follows. The intents are interrelated in a hierarchy such that the attainment of the lower intents enhances the attainment of the higher ones. Purpose is accomplished by fulfilment of objectives, which are realized as a consequence of outcomes. Outcomes are achieved as a result of actions, which cannot be carried out without resources and so on.

Intents and Measures

The selection of the measures or the indicators and to assign targets in terms of quantity, quality and time; the procedures for producing the relevant information; and communication of information are important tasks for programme planning to perform at the appropriate time. The general types of indicators to be employed to assess the performance of the programme and the activities are those based on the purpose and objectives, those based on the outcomes—outputs and impacts, and those based on actions—activities and inputs or resources. They comprise the Intents and Measures Matrix.

Intents \ Measures		1	2	3

3	Actions (Process): Activities Inputs	Indicators of actions: activities and inputs	Monitoring: of achievements of activities and inputs	Programme Monitoring Reports

Intents and Measures Matrix

The outcome measures assess the effects or achievements. The actions or process measures focus on the activities and inputs. They assess the effort invested rather than effectiveness. The intents and measures matrix forms the basis of monitoring and evaluation of the programme.

Actions

The actions are of two types: the set of activities to accomplish the outcomes—outputs and impacts, and the allocation of resources or the inputs to achieve the activities efficiently, effectively and adequately and on time. Activities and inputs comprise the process that shapes the outputs. The programme activities correspond one-to-one with the objectives like: legislation enactment activity, revocation and rectification activity, prevention activity, prosecution activity, lustration activity, monitoring activity and divestment activity. The activities subdivide into specific tasks.

Outcomes

The outcomes consist of outputs, which are the deliverables and impacts, which are the actual changes resulting from outputs. The impacts that are intended are the controllable effects of the outputs. The uncontrollable impacts are unforeseen events, side-effects and spill-overs beyond the intended effects of outputs. They may enhance or inhibit the accomplishment of objectives.

Outputs: The tangible outputs expected are of such types as: restituted land and property—from revoked titles, from unjustly enriched, from crimes under penal code, anti-corruption and others laws. Audits—of State Corporations concerning past illegal land transactions, all past illegal allocations of public land, settlement schemes lands diverted to ineligible persons. Systems—better and preventive land administration and information systems and operating procedures. Services—examination and verification of registered titles to land for a fee. Products—land titles insurance products from insurance companies, Register of all public lands of the Republic. Lustration—public officials removed and prohibited from holding public office; and errant professionals disciplined by their respective bodies. Justice (retributive)—convictions under penal code, anti-corruption and other laws; Justice (distributive)—distribution of land divested from the settlement schemes to beneficiaries, intended by the original policy. Below is a qualitative list of outputs and the respective corresponding programme activities:

Legislation enactment activity

Outputs: Amendment of Acts to establish and operate the Tribunal.

Rectification / Revocation activity

Outputs: Revocation of illegal titles.
Rectification by means of new titles.
Validation of titles.
Restitution of land and property.
Benefits to State of restitution.

Prosecution activity

Outputs: Investigations of criminal offences.
Prosecutions of offenders for corruption and economic crimes.
Prosecutions of offenders for penal crimes.
Restitution of land under criminal procedures.

Prevention activity

Outputs: Elimination of opportunity for corrupt and fraudulent practices.
Compliance at high level with legal and administrative procedures.
Investigation of system of title insurance.
Counteraction of environmental degradation of forestlands, wetlands, riparian lands and the foreshores.

Lustration activity

Outputs: Removal of involved public officials from employment.
Barred perpetrators from holding public office.
Disciplinary measures against errant professionals.

Monitoring Activity

Outputs: Register of public land of the Republic of Kenya.
Audit of illegal allocations.
Assessment of the extent of illegal allocations.
Referral of illegal allocations to the Tribunal.
Audit of State Corporations of illegal deals and action on criminal offences.
Digitalized registered titles.

Divestment Activity

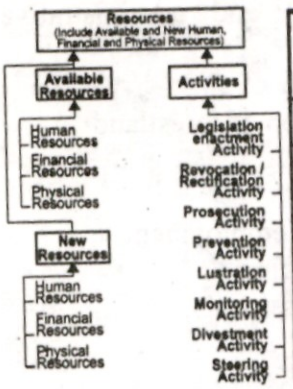

Outputs: Dispossession of diverted land.
Distribution of dispossessed land to intended beneficiaries.

Resources and Costs

The structuring of the resources element involves identifying the categories and the types of resources that will be required to establish and operate the programme. The resources element structure consists of human, financial and physical resources. The two main categories are the available resources and the new resources needed. The programme activities can be grouped into three sets. They are: those that can be realized using available resources in the government system; those that can be achieved by employing available resources but would require moderate new resources; and those that cannot be realized without substantial new resources. The legislative and lustration activity can be grouped into the 'available' set. The prevention, monitoring, divestment and the steering activity belong to the 'moderate' set; and the revocation and rectification and the prosecution activities constitute the 'substantial' set. The Programme Activities and Resources Matrix provides a general overview. It is a basis for developing a qualitative and quantitative estimation of resources.

The structuring of the cost element involves identifying the types and categories of costs that will be incurred by establishing and operating the programme. The cost element structure consists of functions, equipment, and supplies that require the expenditure of resources—human, financial and physical. The two main categories are primary (direct) costs and secondary (indirect) costs. The former are of three types: one -time fixed costs, (research, planning, development, evaluation etc.); capital costs (land, building, equipment and vehicles, initial training etc.); and recurring costs (salary, wages, fringe benefits, operations and maintenance, extended support services, recurrent training etc.). The latter are costs to third parties, among others. The Programme Activities and Costs Matrix provides a general overview of the categories and types of costs that would be incurred to realize the programme. It is a basis for developing a qualitative and quantitative estimation of costs.

Plan

The plan element of the programme structures the process sequence. The pictorial display of the plan follows. It begins with the concluding event of the inquiry phase, that is, the submission by the Commission of Inquiry of its report to the President.

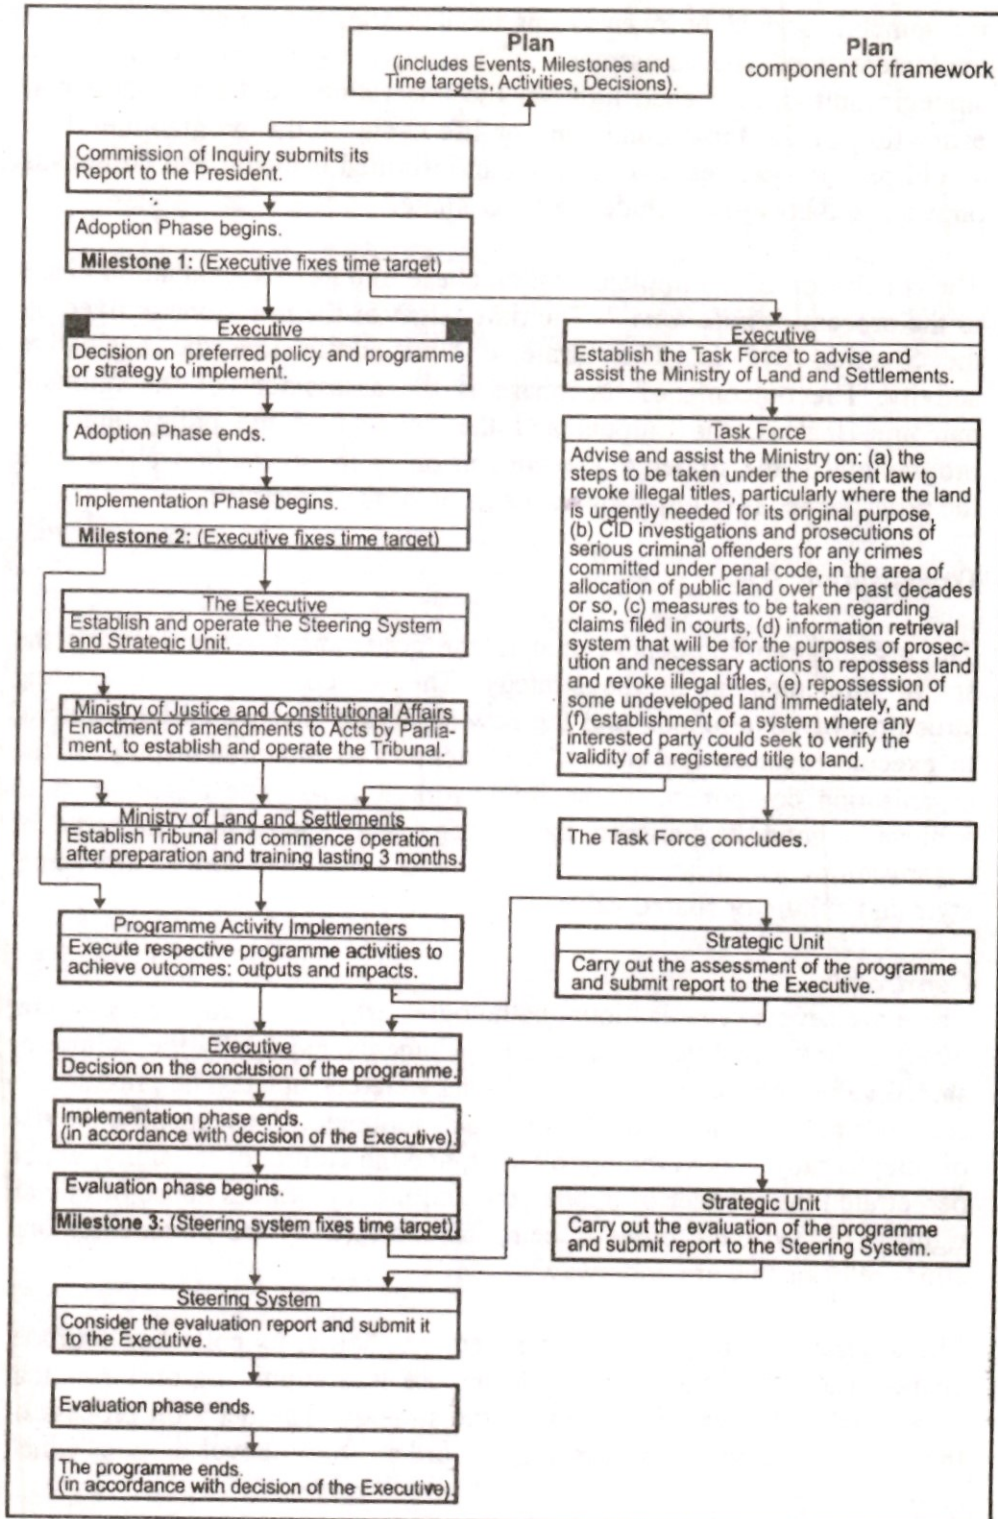

How long will the process take from beginning to the end? The answer to the question is constrained by the uncertainty concerning the turnaround time or the life cycle of the programme that would be implemented. It is dealt with further on.

The concluding event of the inquiry phase initiates the adoption phase of the process, or milestone 1. The fixing of the time target of the milestone is at the discretion of the Executive. Responsiveness is very desirable and the phase should be concluded, as soon as practicable. It includes the execution of an activity and the making of a decision by the Executive. The outcome expected from the phase is: the establishment and operation of the Task Force, recommended by the Commission, to advise and assist the Ministry of Land and Settlements on immediate actions in several areas, until such time as The Land Titles Tribunal is established and operated; and the decision of the Executive on the preferred policy and programme to implement, to redress the past wrongdoings and the prevention in the future.

The conclusion of the adoption phase initiates the implementation phase of the process, or milestone 2. The fixing of the time target of the milestone is also at the discretion of the Executive. The phase includes two sets of activities and a decision of the Executive. The first set of activities is to do with: the enactment of a new section into the Government Lands Act (GLA)—to establish the Tribunal, including consequential amendments to other legislation; the establishment and commencement of operation of the Tribunal, after preparation and training lasting three months; and the establishment and operation of the steering system and the strategic unit for the oversight and the steering of the programme. The second set of activities is to do with execution of the respective substantive activities of the programme, including oversight and steering. The decision of the Executive is on when and how to conclude the programme.

The expected outcomes of the phase are the outputs of the activities, illustrated under outcomes. The question of how long the process will take to achieve the outcome can be addressed by conducting an assessment of the programme at an appropriate time, which the Commission recommends should be twenty-four months after the commencement of implementation. The assessment, which ought to be conducted by the strategic unit, should shed light on the uncertainty, and arrive at a real estimation of the turnaround time or life cycle of the programme. This would permit the Executive to reach an informed decision and consensus on when and how to conclude the programme.

The conclusion of the implementation phase initiates the evaluation phase of the process or milestone 3. The time target of the milestone is fixed by the Steering System. The Strategic Unit administers the evaluative activity. The outcome of the phase is the assessment of the ultimate outcome, that is, the outputs and the impacts of the policy and the programme or the strategy. The conclusion of the evaluation phase ends the programme, as required by the decision of the Executive.

Organisation

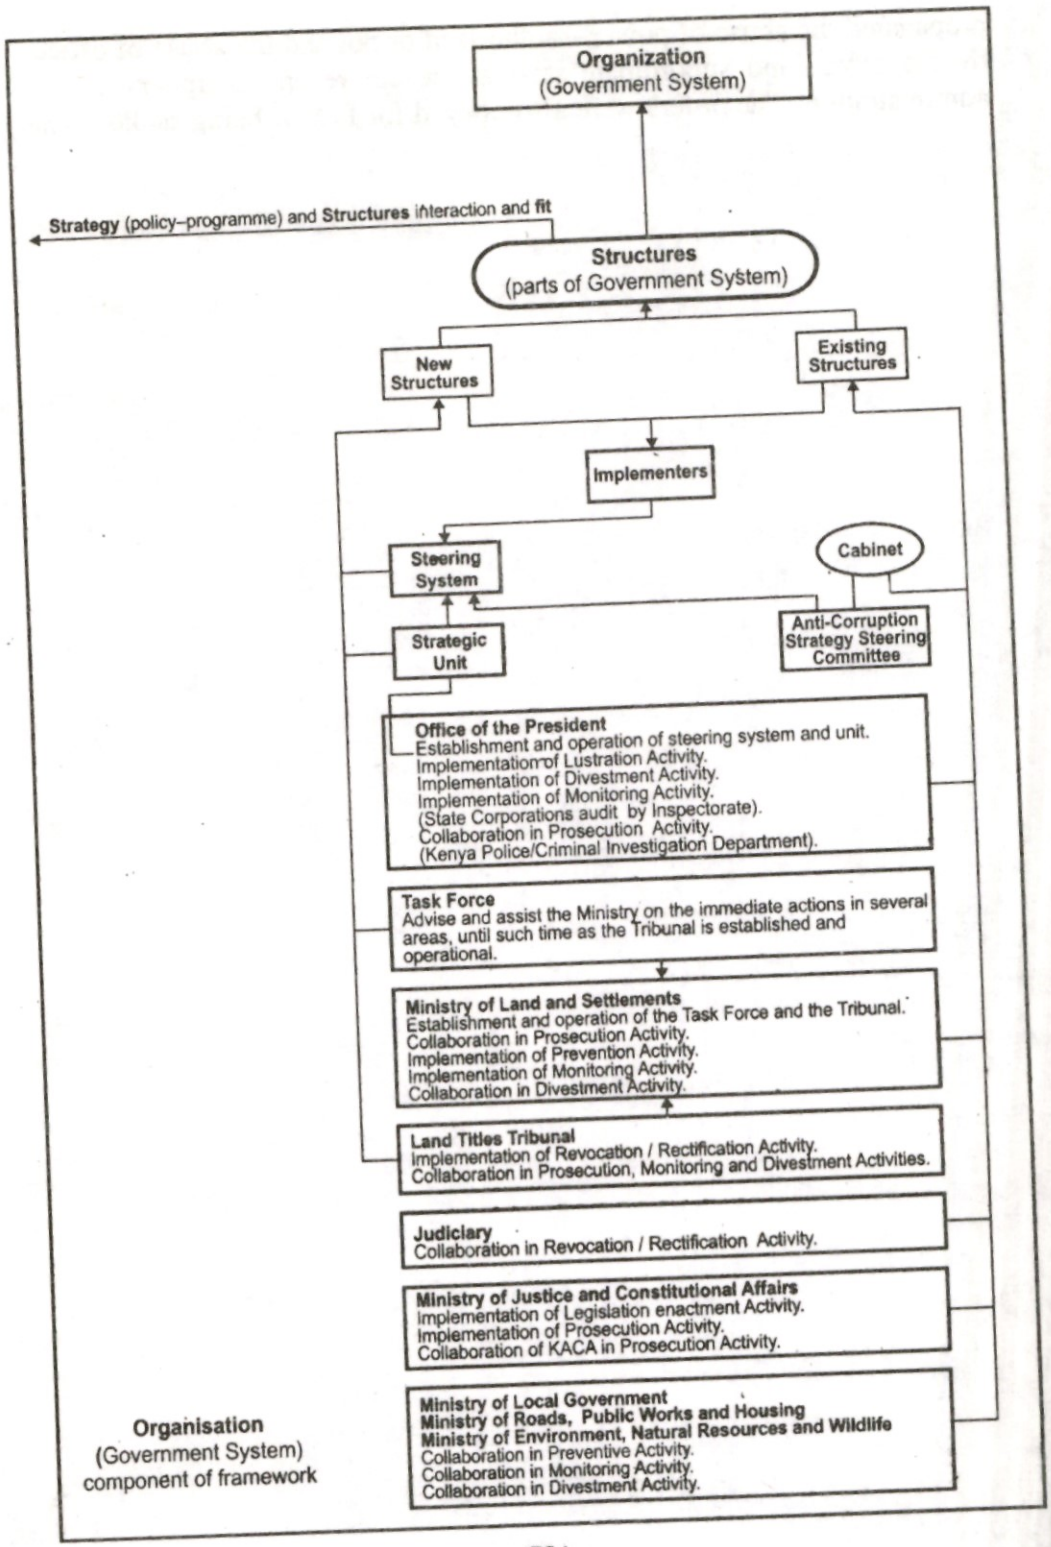

The organisation component, that is, the government system reveals the set of implementers of the strategy. The set consists of the existing structures of government, and the new structures that would be required, to execute, oversee and steer the strategy. The pictorial display of the organisation component of the framework follows. The challenge is to achieve a good fit between the strategy, and such other elements of organisations as: structures, systems, staff, skills and core competence, style and culture or shared values.

Constraints

There are severe organizational pathologies originating from the past era, which afflicted and degenerated these elements, especially the culture or shared values of the civil service. Norms were corrupted. The pressures to commit immoral, illegal and criminal acts mounted. Consequently, the rise of 'kleptocracy'—government by theft, and the culture of impunity, which perpetrated the plunder of public land and money besides abuse of human rights. This systemic crisis is being ameliorated by the governance and ethics reforms that are underway.

The degenerate culture of the civil service, that is, its collective attitude, character and the reputation would impose limitations and obstacles that may stand in the way of achieving the strategy. The decision process of the civil service was characterized by 'orders from above' dictum, which propagated the abuse of power—authorized or not and the abuse of office, by the senior and subordinate staff at the centre and periphery of the administration. The orders were also obeyed for fear of being sacked. The administrative style of subservience and unquestioned conformity to the dictates of the political patron led to the systemic crisis of accountability, transparency and integrity. The aftermath would also inhibit the implementation of the strategy.

There would be risk of covert politics and resistance to the strategy, by those inside the bureaucracy and their allies outside, whose stakes—the ill-gotten land and property, would be threatened by it. Therefore, the implementers of the strategy should be appropriately and adequately prepared to confront this challenge. The top civil servants and policymakers should move from the inherited dictatorial and autocratic style, to a participative style of administration. They should internalize NARC's electoral promise to the citizens regarding the realization of "good governance and participatory democracy".

Structures

The new structures that would be established and operated, as recommended by the Commission, include The Land Titles Tribunal, the Task Force to advise and assist the Ministry of Land and Settlements, and the Steering System and the Strategic Unit. These new structures and the existing structures that would be involved constitute the set of implementers of such programme activities as: revocation and rectification, prosecution, prevention, lustration, monitoring and divestment.

The Land Titles Tribunal

The Tribunal would be established and operated by the enactment of an amendment—a new Section 147(A), to the Government Lands Act (GLA). The Tribunal shall consist of a Chairperson, a Deputy Chairperson and nine members, appointed by the Minister, with specified qualifications and credentials. The Tribunal is a quasi–judicial body. It would have the same jurisdiction and powers as conferred upon the High Court in Civil matters.

Task Force

A Task Force to advise and assist the Ministry of Land and Settlements is recommended by the Commission. It should be established and operated under the Executive power of government, under Section 23 of the Constitution. It would consist of specialists in the area of land law and land administration from outside Government and Permanent Secretary of Ministry of Land and Settlements, Permanent Secretary of Ministry of Local Government, Permanent Secretary of Ministry of Environment, Natural Resources and Wildlife, Director of Kenya Anti-corruption Commission and Director of Criminal Investigations Department. The Task Force would advise and assist the Ministry on: revocation of illegal registered titles; repossession of land; measures to be taken regarding claims filed in the courts; information retrieval systems for multiple purposes; and verification of the validity of registered titles to land. It would assist CID on investigating and prosecuting criminal offenders under the Penal Code in the area of illegal allocation of land in the past decade or so.

Steering System and Strategic Unit

The role of these structures is in a real world situation is to think ahead and adapt en route the implementation of the strategy, as the circumstances demand. A triad comprising a helmsman, a captain and a navigator constitute a good analogy of the steering system. The implementers of the activities are the helmsmen of the programme—the drivers of change. The Steering System should have the representation of the Anti-Corruption Strategy Steering Committee, which as the policy-maker is the captain, the one who makes changes in the destination or policy. The Strategic Unit is the navigator, who charts the course, ensures that the programme is on the right path and changes course only as the circumstances demand.

An important task would be to monitor policy slippages and drifts in the course of implementation. Slippages are associated with distortions of policy intentions and drifts occur when the original policy intentions are fundamentally altered. The Strategic Unit is responsible for seeing that the strategy is put into effect. It performs the planning, coordinating, communicating, monitoring and evaluating functions. Therefore, the unit should be endowed with appropriate and adequate human resources and the support services.

Implementers

The implementers and those who would be collaborators, include: the Ministry of Land and Settlements which is the focal point of implementation; the Land Titles Tribunal; Office of the President—Governance and Ethics, Kenya Police (CID), Inspectorate of State Corporations; Kenya Anti-Corruption Authority (KACA); the Ministry of Justice and Constitutional Affairs; Judiciary; and the Ministries of Local Government; Roads, Public Works and Housing; and Environment, Natural Resources and Wildlife. They would execute the respective programme activities. The oversight and steering activity would be the responsibility of the Steering System and the Strategic Unit.

An 'implementer and measures matrix' could be devised for rapid assessment of any implementer, around such criteria as: responsiveness, adequacy, appropriateness, effectiveness and efficiency, with respect to structure, staff, systems, skills, style and most importantly, culture or shared values.
