PART II

1. The purpose of the Statutory Instrument

- 1.1. The purpose of the Banking (Credit Reference Bureau) Regulations, 2020 is to give effect to Section 31(3) of the Banking Act.
- 1.2. To provide a revised framework for credit information sharing by introducing a raft of amendments to the then Credit Reference Bureau Regulations, 2013 (now repealed).

The Regulations provide for, among other things, licensing, establishment and operation of credit reference bureaus (CRBs), the sharing of credit information of customers of banks, microfinance banks and sacco societies with CRBs, nature of credit information to be shared, corporate governance of CRBs, uses of CRB reports, data security and management, obligations of all participants in the credit information sharing framework, supervision by the Central Bank of Kenya (CBK), penalties for violating the Regulations and reporting requirements.

2. Legislative Context

- 2.1. The Regulations are made in line with section 31(3) of the Banking Act and the Statutory Instruments Act. Section 31(3) as read together with section 31(4) of the Banking Act empowers the Cabinet Secretary to develop regulations for the establishment and operation of credit reference bureaus and for the exchange of credit information between institutions licensed under the Banking Act, Microfinance Act and Sacco Societies Act.

- 2.2. The Regulations set out the regulatory framework for the establishment, operation and supervision of credit reference bureaus and for the exchange of credit information, under the supervision of the Central Bank of Kenya.

3. Policy Background

- 3.1. The Cabinet Secretary for the National Treasury and Planning issued the Credit Reference Bureau, 2013 which have provided the regulatory framework for the licensing, establishment and operation of bureaus. These Regulations have also provided the framework for exchanging credit information between banks and mortgage finance companies licensed under the Banking Act and microfinance banks licensed under the Microfinance Act.
- 3.2. A number of reasons informed the need to revise and/or review the Credit Reference Bureau Regulations, 2013. Some of these reasons were statutory while others were new issues and challenges which were witnessed during the implementation of the CRB Regulations, 2013.
- 3.3. The need to bring sacco societies licensed under the Sacco Societies Act within the credit information sharing framework, given the amendment to section 31(4) of the Banking Act in 2012 and section 31(3)(b) of the Banking Act in 2016. The CRB Regulations, 2013 did not extend to sacco societies hence they could not share credit information with CRBs and financial institutions such as banks and microfinance banks, which were adequately covered by the CRB Regulations, 2013.
- 3.4. The Finance Act, 2016 amended section 31 of the Banking Act by providing for cross-border sharing of credit information between various entities including regulators, CRBs and financial institutions. Regulations therefore needed to be issued to provide the necessary regulatory framework for cross-border credit information sharing.
- 3.5. During the implementation of the CRB Regulations, 2013, issues were noted which needed to be addressed through issuance of revised Regulations. These include requiring CRBs to generate credit scores for a person which a lender can rely on to assess credit risk of a person; suitability assessment of agents before appointment; preparation of reports on suitability assessment of agents; CRB fees to be approved by CBK to prevent exploitation of CRB report seekers by CRBs; enhancing corporate governance of CRBs by requiring a diversified board composition; requiring CRBs to have their financial statements audited annually and audit reports submitted to the CBK; and requiring CRBs to publish a list of third party credit information providers with whom they have entered into credit information sharing agreements; providing a minimum threshold of negative credit information which can be submitted to CRBs; making it mandatory for CRBs to issue clearance certificates to applicants free of charge, in the first instance and giving the Cabinet Secretary the power, on recommendation of the Central Bank to suspended through a gazette notice, the exchange of some aspects of negative credit information, for reasons stated and for a specified period.

- 3.6. The outcomes of these changes will enhance the credit information sharing framework, make it more credible and friendly to all the stakeholders and generally increase the use of CRB reports and credit scores in Kenya and beyond.
- 3.7. Given the depth of the new issues to be addressed, the CRB Regulations, 2013 needed to be repealed and new and comprehensive CRB Regulations issued by the Cabinet Secretary.

4. Consultation Outcome

- 4.1. The Regulations were developed by the Central Bank in close collaboration with stakeholders including the National Treasury, the Attorney General's Office, Sacco Regulatory Authority (SASRA), Kenya Bankers Association (KBA), Association of Microfinance Institutions (AMFI), existing CRBs, banks, mortgage finance companies, microfinance banks, sacco societies and members of the public.
- 4.2. The Central Bank on May 31, 2019 wrote directly to key stakeholders forwarding the draft Regulations to them inviting them to review and submit their comments by June 17, 2019. Some of the stakeholders written to directly included CRBs, KBA, AMFI, SASRA, banks, mortgage finance companies and microfinance banks.
- 4.3. The Central Bank equally published the draft Regulations on its website on May 31, 2019 and invited comments from members of the public.
- 4.4. The Central Bank collected, collated and considered the views of the stakeholders and the public and material comments or contributions were incorporated in the draft Regulations, The revised draft Regulations was forwarded to the Cabinet Secretary of the National Treasury and Planning in January 2020 for publication.

A summary of the stakeholder statistics engagements is as tabulated:

5. Impact

5.1. The Impact on Fundamental Rights and Freedom

The Regulations seek to enhance the credit information sharing framework and to promote the rights of persons (natural and juristic) by providing a clear mechanism for the sharing of confidential credit information of persons. The Regulations also limit the use of confidential credit information to only authorized purposes. The Regulations make it mandatory that where the law does not permit mandatory sharing of credit information of a person, express consent of the person must be sought and obtained before his credit information is obtained and shared. The Regulations do not therefore limit or infringe upon any right or fundamental freedom under the Bill of Rights. With an efficient and clear framework on credit information, borrowers and other interested persons will benefit immensely when their credit reports influence decisions in their favour.

5.2 The impact on the Private Sector

The Regulations will enable lenders to obtain and assess full credit information of loan applicants. Credit reports and credit scores prepared by CRBs will enable lenders to make accurate credit assessment of loan applicants hence they will be able to accurately assess credit risk of loan applicants. Lenders will therefore adopt risk-based pricing whereby a borrower's credit risk is assessed based on his credit information and the outcome of this credit risk assessment should inform lenders' credit decisions. Lenders will be able to extend loans based on credit scores of borrowers, without requiring physical security. Lenders will therefore be able to extend more loans to borrowers which will increase their asset base (loan book) and income (interest from loans). This will increase profitability of lenders. Employers and insurers will also be able to use credit reports to assess financial integrity of applicants hence will be able to make informed decisions on employment and insurance applications. All these will make the private sector more vibrant and supportive of economic development of the country.

5.3 The impact on the Public

The Regulations will enable members of the public to access more credit from lenders based on their credit reports and credit scores. Positive credit information of borrowers will act as information capital which may be used as substitutes for physical collateral for loans. It is expected that there will be more credit facilities to members of the public (borrowers) based on credit scores. Increased access to credit will boost economic power of the people and this will have direct impact on alleviation of poverty, engagement in income-generating activities and improvement of livelihood of many people. The fixing of threshold of negative credit information at Kshs. 1,000 which will be reportable to CRBs will ensure that the many micro-loan borrowers and low-income earners whose default amounts are below Kshs. 1,000 will not be listed with CRBs, hence preserving their ability to access more credit to boost their financial situations. The requirement for CRBs to issue the first clearance certificate free of charge will enable school and college leavers seeking employment to access clearance certificates easily and this will increase their chances of being considered for employment by potential employers who require such clearance certificates. The Regulations will also provide a reprieve to borrowers who for reasons beyond their control, are not able to service their loans regularly and therefore stand the risk of their negative credit information submitted to CRBs. Negative credit information of borrowers who have been incapacitated for reasons such as a pandemic will not be submitted to CRBs, if the Cabinet Secretary, on the recommendation of the Central Bank suspend the exchange of such negative credit information. This will give them an opportunity to reorganize their financial situations without the impact of a negative credit report from a CRB.

6. Monitoring and review

6.1 The Central Bank of Kenya and the relevant stakeholders including the credit reference bureaus and credit information providers will be responsible for monitoring and review of the credit information sharing framework. The Regulations may be amended from time to time in future to ensure that they are continually aligned to the nature of credit information sharing.
